The Bronco was not manufactured by Fender until the early s. Anachronisms Buddy and Maria are shown at a 3D movie in These type of movies were popular in and Anachronisms When Buddy sees his girlfriend off on the bus, the camera pans over to the bus station past a gas station that has a billboard with a Century 21 real estate sign over it. Century 21 started in Anachronisms The world map on the wall behind Buddy in the Greyhound Bus station shows the continent of Africa as made up of independent states. At the time "Cindy Lou" was going off to college, Africa was mostly comprised of British, French, Belgian, and Portuguese colonies which did not gain their independence till the s. In , the first two digits of all phone numbers consisted of letters, denoting the exchange. CBS bought Fender in six years after Buddy died. CBS Strats are easily identified by the larger style headstock and the different style headstock decals. Anachronisms In the roller rink scene, numerous pinball machines featuring rotary score wheels can be seen in the background. You can clearly read the large "Telecaster" logo which was introduced when CBS bought the company from Leo Fender in the late s. Anachronisms Before showing the outside of his last concert you can see the logo for Georgia State University. The name Georgia State University did not come into existence until Anachronisms In the final concert scene, a number of men in the front rows of the audience have full, longish hair typical of the late s rather than short cuts they would have worn during the period the film is set. Anachronisms The "Ludwig" logo on the drums was not adopted until the s. Anachronisms In the roller-rink scene, Cindy Lou is drinking from a quarter-inch-or-more-diameter straw. In the s, straws were much narrower and came in 2s. Character error Gary Busey sings the lyrics out of sync of the original songs lyrics throughout the movie. Continuity The coffee pot in the Holly apartment leaps from the kitchen counter to the dining table between shots. Continuity When Buddy plays his acoustic guitar for the two neighbor boys, it is in concert pitch. A moment after they leave, he picks up the guitar again. When he strums it this time, it is tuned a semitone below concert pitch. Continuity at around 1 min Buddy pulls the truck into a garage to unload boxes from the back of the truck. Boxes in back of truck appear and disappear as Buddy moves them to shelf stacks. One time he takes some and none appear in truck but when he comes back to truck, more are magically there. Near the end of this scene, the green toolbox also mysteriously disappears. Then, right when Buddy leaves, the recorder is off even though he never flipped the off switch. Errors in geography There are no mountains in Lubbock, Texas. Holley even helped Buddy write "Maybe Baby". Factual errors During his final concert, Buddy Holly is backed by a full orchestra. In reality, he toured with a small unnamed band consisting of Waylon Jennings on bass, Carl Bunch on drums and Tommy Allsup on lead guitar. Factual errors Buddy never toured with Sam Cooke. In fact, Buddy reputedly tithed regularly to his church. The Holley correct family name were Baptists. However, Holly is seen rehearsing "Peggy Sue" before the show, which could be a reference to the original show or just a coincidence. Factual errors As the disabled bus is towed into Clear Lake, Iowa, it is of the "Greyhound" cross-country type. Factual errors Although the film correctly notes that the song "Peggy Sue" was originally called "Cindy Lou," Holly actually used the name of his niece, not his girlfriend. Factual errors The closing caption refers to "Clearlake" one word , Iowa. The same mistake is made in the name of the erroneous "Clearlake Auditorium". Factual errors Buddy Holly played the Fender Stratocaster guitar. In the movie, he plays a Telecaster. Factual errors Buddy Holly did not produce his recordings. Norman Petty was producer for most of his career. Factual errors KDAV was a daytime-only radio station in the s. Mauldin, not Jesse and Ray Bob as in the movie. Also throughout the movie, Buddy plays a white, CBS-era Fender Telecaster with black pickguard not a standard feature until and rosewood fretboard not a standard feature until Towards the end of the movie, Buddy is playing a CBS-era Fender Stratocaster with large headstock a feature from Revealing mistakes As Gary Busey is about to sing "Mockingbird Hill", he looks down at a piece of paper taped to the top of his guitar. Busey had forgotten the lyrics to the song and wrote them down on that paper so he could remember them during his performance. But when the band mates pull up along side
