

Chapter 1 : The Reunion (Animorphs #30) by Applegate, K.A. | eBay

"Megan & Carey read Animorphs book The Escape! Let's all go to the Amazon Cafe and think deeply about frog aliens, Marco and his feelings, all the adults whose lives are ruined by animorphs, so many sharks, inter-Visser politics saving the day again and one extended, somewhat irrelevant digression about driftball".

Happy long weekend, folks in the US who have Memorial Day off! Chapter 24 Team Infiltration goes running to find Team Distraction, morphing as they go, with Marco pulling out his gorilla morph in preparation for a fight. Visser One is also stomping toward the scene, kicking downed Hork-Bajir along the way and demanding they get up and fight. He starts cackling about his impending promotion, while Visser One goes racing for the computers to try to stop the impending disaster. Meanwhile the Animorphs regroup, and since V3 has lost his other enemy to taunt, he decides to spend the next two minutes and forty seconds chomping down on the Andalite bandits, so he goes after Ax and manages to snap him up with giant snake jaws. Rachel threatens V3 with bear claws right in his soft snake belly if he hurts Ax, and Marco punches V3 in his big yellow snake nose, and he drops Ax and sort of slithers away back into the water. Point to the Animorphs. So, Marco can try to stop his friends from killing his mother, or he can't. Can we go back to the end of the last chapter when everything was hilarious? Marco, running on instinct, grabs a chair and flings it at Visser One with all his gorilla strength to save Rachel. But what he definitely does do, is crack the glass porthole behind her. Because the suction from the water pouring in through the broken window has apparently sucked Visser Three in, along with tons of water, and everyone gets swept away through the hallways on a flood of rapidly rising water. The Animorphs start to morph as fast as they can. A Leeran is closing in on her fast, and before Marco can even try to intervene, another gush of water floods him away, trying desperately to morph some gills ASAP. Chapter 27 All the Animorphs get safely morphed and outside the facility, where they run into some of the other hammerheads. And, frankly, he was having a pretty shitty day even before that. Which he does, getting some of his rage out by taking some pretty solid bites out of one of the other sharks. Probably crushing and killing bunches of people? Sounds like a day that ends in Y for the Animorphs! In the distance, a giant yellow snake zips away, Extra to the bitter end of the book. Rachel stops for a minute, though, to ask if anyone else can hear what she hears - maybe the submarine? To give him some hope that his mother might have escaped - could the Leeran have gotten her in time and gotten her to the sub? Time to make a decision, and in a moment of probably-stupid, probably-doomed optimism that he might get to have his family back one day, Marco decides: The question in my mind is, did that Leeran who knew the truth live? Is he the one who rescued her? Is he going to tell someone that the bandits are human? Are the Yeerks starting an internet service provider?

However, being a dolphin, it proceeds to torture him relentlessly. That was my thought process as well. Well, I figure that if an animal is sufficiently excited or angered, it can resist the trance. Oh I guess that makes sense. They finally get to this island which is near where the Yeerks are doing their thing. Though they are in dolphin morph so they have to derp around for a while first. While doing so, Marco freaks out over Ax having a shark morph. And I can understand having developed a fear of them, after getting disemboweled by an earlier book. But noone seems to appreciate the irony of being nervous around an animal because it is a large toothy predator. While they are morphed into an animal that is a large toothy predator. I can understand having developed a fear of them as they have like three rows of teeth Ifi: They have teeth and then behind the teeth are more teeth and then behind those teeth guess what they have???? Hey, I can understand sharks. They sometimes attack animals because they are hungry Adam: And they almost never attack people, and when they do it is largely by accident. Just like you and me! I would also like to bring up the fact that Hammerhead sharks are currently endangered. Do you know why they are endangered? Because they are delicious. Too many people are eating them. I only get to have it every few years: Where are all the people eating shark and why are they not inviting me to dinner? I would certainly like to try some. Anyway Ax is a tiger shark and I dunno if people eat those. Well sure someone Ifi: If you can eat it someone somewhere has eaten it Ifi: And that includes things like airplanes Adam: Where are these people eating airplanes? Tragedy of tragedies Ifi: So there is like a hologram thing but they just swim through it We headed straight for the place our eyes told us was just seabed. We swam for maybe fifty feet and then everything changed. It was like sticking your head through a movie screen and suddenly seeing the stage behind it. There, less than a quarter mile from the mansion on Royan Island and two hundred feet underwater, was a pink-shaded structure built into the side of an underwater slope. There were three vast openings, each big enough to drive a dump truck through. Two were closed by steel doors. The third was open, revealing a dark tunnel. Between these large openings were two circular portholes covered by convex glass or plastic. I could see clearly through one of these transparent blisters. Inside there were humans working at computer workstations. It looked weirdly normal. Like any office full of engineers or whatever. I would watch the hell out of that. The lower levels of the Blade Ship are probably wacky and ridiculous. They sit at desks all day and never get to see any fighting and so their personal idiosyncrasies have turned into full-blown personality disorders and they get no work done and instead have silly interpersonal conflicts. Wow, I suddenly feel intense pity for all the hosts of the Yeerk accountants Ifi: The Yeerks are equally bored so they actually become good friends and that was how the Yeerk Peace Movement started. As large as my current morph. And they are strange in shape. They have heads that are flat in the front but extend out on each side. They have eyes at the end of each side extension. Also, they have fins like mine. A large fish with a dorsal fin and a head that My dolphin heart stopped beating. And realistically speaking, it makes little sense to go after something that can put up a big fight, especially when there is smaller and more numerous prey available Adam: It would be a waste of calories otherwise. Yes but these are not regular sharks these are Yeerk supersharks with adamantium skeletons and healing factor Ifi: Oh and now there are fourteen of them. And they have lasers strapped to their heads. And swim through concrete. God I think I remember this Ifi: Was this some sort of ninja turtles ripoff? Though it did have the advantage of spawning this: I miss the nineties like damn Adam: It was a strange time for us all Ifi: They decide to draw blood from one of the sharks to send them into a feeding frenzy but it does not work. Now we are utterly screwed. It was a siren, just loud enough to be heard with acute dolphin hearing. But instantly, without hesitation, the sharks turned around and swam away. Dun dunnnnn At the front of the sub was what had to be the command bridge. There were Hork-Bajir and Taxxons working at red-and-yellow computer terminals. And in the center of the room was a chair. Standing beside the chair was a bizarre creature. It had pebbly yellowish skin that seemed slimy, like it was coated with Vaseline. It sat like a frog on big hind legs with webbed feet. It had a big head that just sat on its shoulders with no neck. The face was curved outward, with a hugely wide mouth that seemed frozen in a sort of idiot grin. There were two eyes, both brilliant green and large. As the sub passed beneath us, this creature seemed to shake, like he was having just a slight tremor. I saw him turn around to face us as we receded behind the sub. He gazed at us with his blazing green eyes. Because the frog thing sort of looked troubled, then shrugged in a very humanlike gesture. The person in the chair stood up. She turned around and looked up. Oh and also some frog thingies I guess Adam: The Leeran seriously sounds super adorable Adam: I want a plushy of one. Write to scholastic Adam: I will consider it Ifi: Okay so Marco goes home to angst and fail a paper Those were not normal sharks," Cassie pointed out. They worked like a pack. I mean, we discovered horses being made into Controllers," Rachel pointed out. There is no room in that brain for a Yeerk. The structures would never support a Yeerk. Is that something that is commonly found? Because if so, I really want one Ifi: Damn western land sharks, always getting hit by cars. I must own Ifi: I would kill so many people Ifi: You and me both Ifi:
