

Chapter 1 : Western Undergraduate Exchange (WUE) | Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education

"The Exercise Exchange Program" is for anyone who has ever found diet and fitness programs restrictive, regimented, dull, and just plain ineffective. It's a proven and flexible alternative that adds variety and interest to your current plan, or helps you create one of your own.

Forces from the Solomon Islands receive instruction on the FN FAL rifle from American Special Forces Joint Combined Exchange Training or JCET programs are exercises designed to provide training opportunities for American Special Forces by holding the training exercises in countries that the forces may one day have to operate in, as well as providing training opportunities for the armed forces of the host countries. Typically, each JCET program involved 10-40 American special forces personnel, though can sometimes involved up to American Special Forces training soldiers from The Philippines. The 7th Special Operations Squadron was involved in the exercise. In , Exercise Flintlock was held in the United Kingdom. However, he fell to his death reportedly due to faulty equipment in hrs accident. This was the last ever attempt to utilize the Skyhook system in a live pick-up. Designed to give the special forces experience of fighting on the continent, these JCET programs are known as Flintlocks and vary from search and rescue exercises, disaster management, or combat life saving. The program is designed to increase the strength of the host nation. The primary aim of the training operation was to increase the capability of African forces to halt the trade in illicit weaponry, anti-terrorism, illegal goods and human trafficking, improving command, control and communications, marksmanship, medical skills and human rights knowledge. There is concern, however, that forces trained by American Special Forces go on to use their new skills to commit war crimes in their home countries and would pose a threat to the stability of the regions. The Leahy Amendment requires that all foreign troops trained by the US military be pre-screened by the US State Department for history of human rights violations allegations. Failure to pass this screening results in the foreign troops or their entire units being excluded from participating in the training. Furthermore, the Leahy Amendment requires that part of the military instruction that US military troops provide to any foreign soldier or unit includes training in human rights and the Law of Land Warfare. US soldiers that provide training to foreign troops are required by the Leahy Amendment to report any evidence of human rights abuses. One report on the subject states that "Militaries strengthened by the United States could end up toppling the very democratic governments that American policy makers want to keep in power. Government from the armed forces, as the current reports to Congress known as the Section report [12] are not required to mention JCET programs relating to counter-narcotic or anti-terrorism activities, however these form a large part of the worldwide JCET program, particularly in Latin America. There are also concerns that the report is incomplete due to problems with the definition of Joint Combined Exchange Training programs. Embassy Tirana, Albania retrieved on March 14, Both tasks involve training indigenous troops - which in and of itself is a perishable and trainable skill set. Thus, the creation of the JCET. It allows SOF to train foreign troops not so much because THEY need it, but because it is a training event that allows the SF folks to maintain instructional skills, develop training aids, hone best instructor practices, language skills, etc.
