Background[edit] Left Lake Front Park in ; Right Art Institute of Chicago in , showing a structure on the Millennium Park site lower left corner , railroad tracks, and Lake Michigan covering most of Grant Park From until , the Illinois Central Railroad owned a right of way between downtown Chicago and Lake Michigan , in the area that became Grant Park and used it for railroad tracks. The grounds were improved and the seating capacity was doubled in , but the team had to move after the season ended the next year, as the federal government had given the city the land "with the stipulation that no commercial venture could use it". Daley Bicentennial Plaza beyond In February , the city announced it was negotiating with Frank Gehry to design a proscenium arch and orchestra enclosure for a bandshell, as well as a pedestrian bridge crossing Columbus Drive, and that it was seeking donors to cover his work. According to John H. Initial construction was under the auspices of the Chicago Department of Transportation , because the project bridges the railroad tracks. The pavilion has 4, fixed seats, plus additional lawn seating for 7,; [46] the stage is framed by curving plates of stainless steel, characteristic of Gehry. It was named after Jay Pritzker , whose family is known for owning Hyatt Hotels and was a major donor. To avoid these legal restrictions, the city classifies the bandshell as a work of art rather than a building. During the holiday season, the plaza hosts Christmas caroling. Composed of stainless steel plates welded together, its highly polished exterior has no visible seams. It reflects the city skyline, [65] [66] particularly the historic Michigan Avenue "streetwall" , and the sky. On the underside is the "omphalos" Greek for "navel" , a concave chamber that warps and multiplies reflections. Cloud Gate was unveiled in an incomplete form during the Millennium Park grand opening celebration, [77] as the grid of welds around each metal panel was still visible. Crown Fountain The videos displayed on Crown Fountain fade to black every 15 minutes. Both the fountain and Millennium Park are highly accessible because of their universal design. It is a popular subject for photographers and a common gathering place. While some of the videos displayed are of scenery, most attention has focused on its video clips of local residents, in which almost a thousand Chicagoans randomly appear on two screens. On December 20, , it became the first attraction in Millennium Park to open, [14] [] a few weeks ahead of the Millennium Park underground parking garage. The Park Grill is the only full-service restaurant in Millennium Park and opened on November 24, One of the most financially successful restaurants in Chicago, the Park Grill remains exempt from property taxes after a multi-year litigation which reached the appellate courts in Illinois. The bridge is referred to as snakelike in character due to its curving form. It is a connecting link between Millennium Park and destinations to the east, such as the nearby lakefront, other parts of Grant Park and a parking garage.

The Lure of the Millennium offers a hopeful guide to the upcoming millennium and discusses the challenges that the world will face in this upcoming age. Bulman examines and uses Christ's thousand year reign on earth, as described in the Book of Revelation, as his basis, exploring pre- and post-millennium theories.

There not in any stores yet, but will be for next season. For Walleyes, pike, and especial Bass. Here is a little article for you: Don Frey, president of Millennium Lure, is a classical entrepreneur. He sees an opportunity, or a void in a market, and goes in to fill it. Don, tell us a little about yourself. Like about everyone in this business, I love to fish and have been doing it all my life. My dad and stepdad took me fishing often and I became quite good at it. I started fishing tournaments as a kid and became convinced that fish would rather eat natural prey than most artificial baits, so I sat down and began to design lures. I went to college for a couple of years then I got involved in custom painting cars. I developed that experience into an auto body and custom truck accessory business that are still running today. This experience in custom painting allowed me to create the lifelike lures that I always knew would be effective. Coupling my interests in custom painting and lure design is how Millennium got started. Tell us about Millennium Lures. What sets Millennium apart from other tackle companies? It was hard to get started in this industry. There is a lot of competition and getting the name out in front of fishermen is a challenge. We had the typical ups and downs tied to starting any business, but I think that made us stronger. The whole key to Millennium is to make something different and lifelike. Our concept is that more realistic baits will catch more fish on more bodies of water and in more conditions. And, our goal is to gradually grow the business through fishermen and custom tackle stores. We may move into big outlets sometime in the future, but right now we are focused on fishermen and local dealers and distributors that sell directly to tackle shops. We build custom baits at a good, competitive price. Being a fisherman myself, I really relate to them. I design the baits myself with ideas from the field. We hand build all the look alike baits, but we use outside vendors for assembly. And, we test all the baits ourselves. Millennium is a real family business and quality is very important to us. We stand behind everything we make. What makes Millennium baits special? Our baits are all American made?. Also, the baits are real photo images of actual fish. We take digital photos of fish, then apply them to the bait in a four-color print process that imbeds the print right into the material we use to make the bait. We make plates of the computerized picture and transfer the image to engraved four-color plates. We now have our own machines for this process and we got a patent on using this process to make soft baits patent number 6., Our process is not like taking a sticker off a sheet and putting it on the body of the bait. These baits really last Run it over rocks, sand, whatever and the image stays. I used to fish lifelike baits all the time and was constantly frustrated by the finish coming off in such a short time. I believe you can catch fish on about anything. Look at some of the antique baits. But, we think that with realistic baits you will catch more fish, and in tougher conditions. How are Millennium Lures distributed? I hope it will change! Right now we have reps across the US and in Canada, but we really want to focus more on grassroots distribution. When they make personal appearances, or just go to a bait store, we want them talking about our lures. We use them to tell the story. We have a number of grassroots pros that we work with on our pro staff, and Tommy Biffle top angler and Classic qualifier is a good friend of mine. These are the guys who come up with new ideas and prove the baits work in the field. They are the best way for us to get the word out.
