

Chapter 1 : The Quiet Company | BHM BIZ

Hey, boys & girls! Who's ready for some new Quiet Company music?! We certainly are.

The classes range from 15, 30 and minute sessions. As word spread and demand grew, Thring, a seasoned meditation and Pilates teacher, knew it was time to take her meditation community to a real building. No longer is it in hushed tones or within a niche community. The popularity allows for more people to participate in the self-care aspect of meditation. You come as you are. That can mean stressed out, anxious or energetic. You just need to be willing. Some days, your brain will have a hard time shutting off. The point of meditating is to gain awareness of your thoughts and watch them as they come in. The more you meditate, the better you get at letting go of the rushed thoughts. When you first walk into the minimalist studio space, you instantly feel a sense of calm wash over you. There are cushions and ergonomic chairs seated on a vintage Moroccan rug from Mellah in Dufferin Grove. This is where the magic happens. The classes are rooted in traditional mindfulness that connect you to your breath. So the classes are categorized to help you find Intention, find Your Heart and find Mindfulness. Each class is guided by a different kind of breathing exercise. Find Your Heart, for example, is all about self-love and compassion. Meditation, ultimately, is like taking a mental break. Early work[ edit ] Muse was on the leading lines of the East Texas indie music boom with his participation in several key projects at the time: Records , as well as giving them their first name, Moss Eisley. He eventually parted ways from the family-formed group to focus on other projects, specifically, the Connotations. After an unsuccessful year with the Connotations in Nashville, TN ; Muse returned to Austin, TX to begin writing and recording what would become the first full-length under the moniker Quiet Company: The record was quickly picked up for online distribution by the boutique Christian label Northern Records. Taking the advice of his then-label Northern, Muse began to reform Quiet Company into the line-up that defines it today, with the first permanent addition being Tommy Blank, via a Craigslist ad, in Muse and his rotating cast of bandmates embarked on a number of small national tours throughout the years. Shortly after, the band left their label to take a more DIY approach. Following the release of Everyone You Love Jeff Weathers and Matthew Parmenter drums and bass guitar, respectively. While filming their second music video for the single from the album, "On Modern Men," the band found their fifth and final member: Songs from Everyone You Love In addition to this, the band has shared the stage with many notable rockers in their home state of Texas: However, for this record, the deeper meaning behind these metaphors means something much different than it did previously for the band. Muse says he receives e-mails frequently from fans who "love the record" but are "concerned" about his departure from religion. The album was made available for download directly from the web. All proceeds from sales went to the Toys for Tots charity. Leveraging the strengths of the company to spearhead a progressive music marketing endeavor, the relationship aimed to provide a realistic strategy for artists in a rapidly changing industry. As of January , the band has had three promotional site takeovers on Grooveshark , grown from near-0 to over 23, listeners daily, and increased Facebook Likes from a little over 2, to well over 50, Justin Kirchoff , currently sits with well over , video views. The album was released February 24, via Modern Outsider Records.

For a quarter century, Fairway Investments has quietly built an enviable commercial real estate portfolio. The company has also recently begun a management arm, as well. The growth has been steady, and of late, Fairway has become more of a presence in the Birmingham business community and beyond. One aspect of that growth in awareness has been the naming of the headquarters building they recently moved into at Highway and Lakeshore. The name Fairway in silver white letters graces the facade of the compact, modern building. We wanted to have more opportunity for growth. We are 25 years old. And this has truly been on-the-job training. We wanted to try the business, own some real estate, and let that compound. We wake up 25 years later and we have a great company. After five or six years, we really liked the business. We have a unique place in the industry by buying and holding and forming great partnerships with people. So we spread our risk over more properties. Now the market is super heated again and that gives a lot of credibility to our strategy of managing for the long term. Values had plummeted and you had no ability to sell the property. Everything that could go wrong went wrong. Now the company is adding more warehouse and office to the mix. Agility, decision-making that does not require layers of approval, and the ability to move at lightning speeds are key ingredients to the success Fairway has achieved. A belief in old-fashioned values also plays a key role, Thompson says. We bring a desire to be very forthright. If we shake hands and say we are going to do something, we do it. The Thompson family business history centers on their Birmingham-based and iconic Caterpillar dealership, Thompson Tractor Company. Thompson Tractor Company, Inc. The company specializes in sales and service of Caterpillar products, including earthmoving; construction and material handling equipment; and diesel engines used for electric power generation, on-highway, and marine propulsion applications. With his business interests straddling the two companies, the differences between the two enterprises are clear to Thompson. At Fairway, we do one-time deals in buying a shopping center from a seller. You might not ever see those people again. At Thompson Tractor, you know what you have to do every day. We have great customers at Thompson and here at Fairway. But both companies are customer-centric, and that focus has helped Fairway develop a unique culture, says company vice president Joanne Mummert. Everything we do is very hands-on. Our approach is very boutique and team-oriented. That is the attitude we employ in how we serve our customers and take care of investors and lenders. It has allowed us to develop a trusting culture. Our people are not disposable, so we want to nurture them and make them the best they can be.
