At the same time, Youngstown never became economically diversified, as did larger industrial cities such as Chicago, Pittsburgh, Akron, or Cleveland. The largest employer in the city is Youngstown State University YSU , an urban public campus that serves about 15, students, located just north of downtown. This company moved away after just a few years. It was recently expanded and retooled with a new paint facility. The latter has recently expanded its operations. The Youngstown Business Incubator YBI , in the heart of the downtown, houses several start-up technology companies that have received office space, furnishings, and access to utilities. One such companyâ€™Turning Technologiesâ€™has been rated by Inc. Magazine as the fastest-growing privately held software company in the United States and 18th fastest-growing privately held company overall. A number of products and enterprises introduced in Youngstown later became national household names. The company now distributes bread products nationally. In the s, Youngstown-born developer Edward J. Mayors are traditionally inaugurated on or around January 2. The council traditionally meets every first and third Wednesday of the month. A publication in The New Republic listed a "chief of police, the outgoing prosecutor, the sheriff, the county engineer, members of the local police force, a city law director, several defense attorneys, politicians, judges, and a former assistant U. The climax of this ongoing effort was the arrest, trial, and conviction of former U. D , on bribery, tax fraud, and racketeering charges. As of , the school district was engaged in a process of reconfiguration, consolidating existing schools while building some new ones. This roster has changed; Chaney expanded, North, South, and the original East were closed, and Rayen and Wilson were closed to make way for a newly built and re-opened East High School. This program enables high school students to attend classes on campus and earn college credit. As a result of dwindling enrollment, only four Catholic schools continue to operate within Youngstown proper. Joseph the Provider â€™ and two secondary schools, Ursuline and Cardinal Mooney. The two high schools share a heated and longstanding rivalry in athletics. Youngstown hosts a small number of private schools. These include Valley Christian School, a nondenominational K school located on the south side of the city; Akiva Academy, a progressive Kâ€™8 school located in the Jewish Community Center; and the Montessori School of the Mahoning Valley, which offers alternative learning environments for students ranging from preschool to eighth grade. Once regarded as a commuter school, YSU serves about 13, students, many from outside the Youngstown area. The Dana School of Music is one of the six oldest continuously operating schools of music in the United States. Covelli Centre Despite the impact of regional economic decline, Youngstown offers an array of cultural and recreational resources. A hockey games, concerts, "on ice" shows, and other forms of entertainment. Ford Recital Hall was built in as an addition to newly renovated Powers Auditorium. The facility also hosts the Stambaugh Youth Concert Band.
