The Melanin Mixer defines a network of people that have come together in order to facilitate, build, expand and enhance ourselves culturally, personally and professional while also doing the same for the community as a whole. One could say that we have come together in order to build a healthy self and community. Common knowledge tells us that melanin is responsible for the pigmentation of the skin. The truth is, however, that Melanin is a key component to maintaining a healthy organism. Melanin is a semiconductor; it is found in bodily regions where energy exchange is occurring. Its function can be likened unto the function of chlorophyll for a plant. Without chlorophyll there would be impaired conversion of carbon dioxide and water into oxygen and glucose. Melanin is an organizing molecule. This exemplifies why Melanin is a most appropriate term to denote our group and objectives. Its function, as is ours, is to create a healthy organism. We are organizing, exchanging information and ideas. We seek to optimize our energy and become much more efficient and productive. It is interesting to note that the melanin found in the brain, neuromelanin, may be more important to the function of the body than the melanin in the skin. The locus coeruleus is the location for several dark melinated nerve cells. Coeruleus is an Indian Sanskrit word that is derived from the Ancient Ethiopian name, Celeno, which means black. Richard King, the author of the book Melanin: Key to Freedom, relates this to the Black Dot which is the doorway to the Amenta, the collective unconscious. We also see the emphasis on the pineal gland as being the third eye in Nile Valley Spiritual Traditions. From a biological standpoint it is well understood that the pineal gland secretes melatonin. Melatonin is one of the most studied substances in the modern scientific community with several research studies, books and products relating to this neurohormone. It is accepted to be an effective antioxidant with anti-aging properties and it is being studied as an effective treatment for a host of degenerative conditions. What is most interesting is how the melanocytes, which are specialized cells that release melanin, relate to the Ancient Egyptian term KA. The KA describes an aspect of the Spirit and it is represented by a hieroglyphic symbol showing two arms outstretched in the form of lifting up or praising as shown below: Likewise the body of the melanocyte resembles KA symbol. It is comprised of a nucleus and two arms extending. The two arms are the receiving points. This becomes an even more significant symbolism when we consider the relationship between melanin and the dark matter of the universe. Dark Matter, which is just now being discovered by modern scientist, permeates the entire universe. What was once considered empty space is now acknowledged as being filled with this mysterious substance. Dark Matter is to the universe what melanin is to our bodies. As above, so below. Through the elaborate world of electromagnetism, our skin and nervous system link our internal melanin to the cosmic melanin to allow us to tune in with cosmic nature. The dark matter of the universe and the blackness of melanin are the material planes that connect our mind and body to the spiritual world. Primary references for this page T.
