Part 1[edit] The reader is introduced to two main characters: Picaro, who is a professional musician and Flayd, who is an archaeologist. They both visit the underwater city of Venus and upon his arrival, Picaro meets a woman named Cora who idolizes him and his music, and he also meets a woman named India. Flayd insists that he has important information to tell Picaro. In a flashback to years ago, Jula, an ancient, undefeated, gladiatrix, thinks about her fight with Phaetho, a gladiator she defeats, and her death. Eventually, Flayd informs Picaro that they are bringing back two people from the ancient times: Jula and Cloudio del Nero who is a possible bloodline to Picaro. A dinner celebration is held for Jula. Picaro has an encounter with a woman who prophesies his death. Picaro eventually meets Cloudio del Nero and learns that he is a former musician and composer. Part 2[edit] Part Two opens up with the revival of Jula within the lab. Flayd is there to accompany Jula into her new existence; meanwhile Picaro is somewhere deep in a flashback. The memories are in clear detail; he remembers how his father sat in fear of his mother across the family dinner table. He remembers how his father sent him away to keep him safe from the woman, Simoon, who they believed to be a witch. Picaro then begins reflect on the death of his father. He was just a boy sent home to reunite with his father, only met by the very woman who sent him away. In search of his father at the, Picaro finds him dead; a victim of an aneurysm. Picaro cannot forget this not even after Cloudio is brought back to life, a musician who shows potential to be a main antagonist. Simoon followed him to the city he was living in, but she was sick, her organs turning to rock. She warned him of three signs: She also warned that he would die underwater, but not from drowning. Later that night, in his anger, he kills her. All the signs later come true, and Picaro receives an invitation to a concert by Cloudio del Nero that seems poised to kill everyone in the audience. Part 4[edit] The final book of Venus preserved focusing on the true history of venus. Fallen angels, purgatory, and religion. Characters you thought you knew are brought to the spotlight where their true forms are seem. India, Claudio, and Picaro are angels where as everyone else, except for Flayd and Jula, are fallen angels who have forgotten their history. Stuck in purgatory and hell Venus tells a story that rewrites Catholicism. The fallen angels were given the choice to leave and take on human bodies where they would dwell in Venus. After this truth is told to Picaro, Jula, and Flayd they fight one last battle against the evil angel of death, Claudio, before sinking the great city of Venus. Setting[edit] Far into the future in an alternate world, the city of Venus has descended into the sea, where it has been reconstructed under a dome and sustained by a complex infrastructure of advanced, ultra-modern computers. This futuristic technology is able to control the surroundings that the public sees encompassing when the sun rises and sets, holographic projections of convincing fauna and flora, air and noise regulation, and weather creation. With such sophisticated technology comes an entirely novel vocabulary of words such as camerecxi, decx, linguisticx, and optecxâ€”all of which are items incorporating super-advanced computerization that is currently unfeasible in the real world. However, Lee does allude to familiar foods and clothing styles that are accepted as societal norms in the cultured society of Venus. These include Italian cuisine e. He is the protagonist of Venus Preserved. He is a successful black musician also known as Magpie. This is a lovely book club edition of "The Secret Books of Venus III & IV," meaning it collects both halves of the second part of Tanith Lee's Venus Cycle. The first book, "A Bed of Earth," takes place in an alternate Renaissance in a parallel Venice, renamed Venus.

She was at first incapable of reading due to a mild form of dyslexia, which was diagnosed later in life, but when she was aged 8, her father taught her to read in about a month, and she began to write at the age of 9. English, history, and religion. After high school, Lee attended Croydon Art College for a year. Realizing that was not what she wanted to do, she dropped out of her course and held a number of occupations: She continued to work in various jobs for almost another decade, due to rejection of her books. Lee subsequently maintained a prolific output in popular genre writing. The style that made her whole career met strict objections from publishers at that time. The refusals did not stop her from writing and she had numerous novels and short stories which were just sitting in her cupboard. But due to the internet sales she succeeded to revive her writing. The royalties were good before the publishers went bankrupt. Lee and Kaiine were also huge fans of Doctor Who. They lived in the south of England. Later tales are loosely based on Babylonian mythology. In the science fiction Four-BEE series, Lee explores youth culture and identity in a society which grants eternally young teenagers complete freedom. Lee has also dabbled in the historical novel with The Gods are Thirsty, set during the French Revolution. Some of her work was only printed in paperback, mainly in the US by DAW in the 80s to the early 90s. She has received some small press treatment, such as the Arkham House edition of short stories Dreams of Dark and Light: Some of her work has been released exclusively in the UK with US publications often pending. From 1980, she began writing Gothic science fiction; her first Gothic novel "Sabella or the Bloodstone" features themes of loneliness and fear. Her collection "Disturbed By Her Song", features themes of eroticism, despair, isolation, and the pressure of an unforgiving and unwelcoming society. The theme of recognition also appears in Drinking Sapphire Wine, where the characters are forced to recognize others and themselves in a world where physical form is so readily alterable. Her husband, a fellow writer, is also an "idea factory."

Lee has since maintained a prolific output in popular genre writing. Everyone said silly things, and I said I wanted to be an actress. So that was what I wanted to be, but what I was, of course, was a writer. I dislike them, but I do not have the casting vote. Somewhere I feel I belong, possibly more than in the so-called real world. I like writing about men, ditto. And all the variants of men and women, beasts and demons. That is part of what makes it so wonderful. And after all, who does? This was not so much a feeling that I should be published as a wish to escape the feared and hated drudgery of normal work. Yes, that old cliché. Perhaps the only true genres are fiction and non-fiction. And even there, who can be sure? Later tales are loosely based on Babylonian mythology. In the science-fiction Four-BEE series Lee explores youth culture and identity in a society which grants eternally young teenagers complete freedom, including getting killed and receiving a new body, gender, identity over and over again.
