

Chapter 1 : Sharing Christmas () - Cast & Crew â€” The Movie Database (TMDb)

Suggest Not Sharing this Christmas Movie 25 January | by gehewe - See all my reviews This is the 2nd Christmas movie I've seen with the lovely Ellen Hollman- The Perfect Christmas List () and that one was a little better with some humor, but not that good.

To us this day a child is given, To crown us with the joy of heaven. Christmas means fellowship, feasting, giving and receiving, a time of good cheer, home. It is more than that. It is a time for the contemplation of eternal things. The Christmas spirit is a spirit of giving and forgiving. This is proved by what we feel in our hearts at Christmas. To cherish peace and good will, to be plenteous in mercy, is to have the real spirit of Christmas. Eight Ways to Beat the Holiday Blues It is tenderness for the past, courage for the present, hope for the future. It is a fervent wish that every cup may overflow with blessings rich and eternal, and that every path may lead to peace. And may the season light your way To hopes and dreams anew. It came without ribbons. It came without tags. It came without packages, boxes or bags. What if Christmas, perhaps, means a little bit more. For Christmas is tradition timeâ€” Traditions that recall The precious memories down the years, The sameness of them all. The good you do for others is good you do yourself. All else is outward displayâ€”so much tinsel and decorations. I was never alone at all. And that, of course, is the message of Christmas. We are never alone. Not when the night is darkest, the wind coldest, the world seemingly most indifferent. For this is still the time God chooses. Then you can keep Christmas. What do you want to give to others for Christmas? What do you want for Christmas? The first fosters generosity of heart and an outward focus. The second can breed selfishness if not tempered by the first. The very word brings joy to our hearts. No matter how we may dread the rush, the long Christmas lists for gifts and cards to be bought and givenâ€”when Christmas Day comes there is still the same warm feeling we had as children, the same warmth that enfolds our hearts and our homes. It may weave a spell of nostalgia. Christmas may be a day of feasting, or of prayer, but always it will be a day of remembrance â€” a day in which we think of everything we have ever loved. May God make you very rich in both. They sit silently on the floor, perhaps perplexed, perhaps in awe, no doubt in amazement. Their night watch had been interrupted by an explosion of light from heaven and a symphony of angels. God goes to those who have time to hear himâ€”and so on this cloudless night he went to simple shepherds. Feed the hungry, clothe the naked, forgive the guilty, welcome the unwanted, care for the ill, love your enemies, and do unto others as you would have done unto you. Come to think of it, why do we have to wait for Christmas to do that? If we think on these things, there will be born in us a Savior and over us will shine a star sending its gleam of hope to the world.

Chapter 2 : 48 Joyous Christmas Quotes to Brighten the Season - Daring to Live Fully

A real estate developer gets the opportunity of his career, transforming an old shopping complex into a prime location. Unfortunately, there is one tenant hold out, the Christmas shop owner.

Yes, Christmas has a history , and that history affects us all, but each family has their own Christmas traditions and meaning. Children find yet a different meaning and one that changes as they grow and develop. Christmas in New York, Rockefeller Plaza, Source Christmas Giving and Sharing Certainly Christmas is a time of giving and sharing with those around us, but that sharing is not limited to those that we love and care for. It is also for the person that we have never met and will never see. Those that are not so fortunate in their lives as we are and that could use a helping hand. I would like to digress just a little here with story from our past that is pertinent. We always helped staff the store, repairing toys, setting the store up and displaying the toys. It fell to me to check off the people entering the store you had to be on the list to receive any toys and it was often not a pleasant task. I watched as some people took the bag we gave them and simply walked the aisles scooping toys until the bag was full; what they took was immaterial as long as they got "their share" of free toys. Others were downright nasty as the line was always long and the most prized toys went first. One lady, though, came in with her daughter of perhaps 4 or 5. Receiving their bag they carefully went down the rows of toys, choosing for each family member and thinking to leave some for the next person in line. Finished although their bag was only half full , they headed for the exit when the little girl suddenly stopped dead in her tracks, handed the special doll she had chosen for herself to her mother and dashed back towards me with her pigtails flying. Frightened at her own audacity she nevertheless threw herself at me, and with a whispered "Thank you so much! That 30 second episode more than made up for the long days in the store and the offensive behavior of some patrons. Nor does the giving stop with the adults; the little ones love to put the coins into the Salvation Army buckets where bell ringers ask for your help. They quite understand what it is about and wish to be a part of helping others. They learn giving here and can that be a bad thing? The younger members of our family, beginning at 4 or 5 years old, participate in choosing and buying gifts for siblings and others. A great time to introduce the concept to them. Christmas is a time of generosity and sharing for us. It can be throwing a few coins into the bell ringers bucket, it can be giving time and work when we would rather be home, warm and comfortable, or it can be sharing our own Christmas. We often invite someone without nearby family to share our enjoyment of Christmas dinner and the camaraderie of the day. It all adds to the wonder of Christmas and we are never poorer for doing it. Handmade ornaments that have been on the tree for many many years. Source Christmas Family Traditions Our family has, over the years, developed many traditions just for Christmas. Everything waits until after Thanksgiving although gift purchases may start as early as the day after Christmas for the next year. For several years it was a yearly event to find and cut a Christmas tree. Waiting for a snowy day, with the family bundled up and warm we searched through a nearby field that was thick too thick with small pine trees. Those days are gone, the field no longer available, and we now use a shudder fake tree, but it is still a big day when the tree comes out for decoration and our home begins to look like Christmas. Before our children were ever born, my wife made a few Christmas tree ornaments by hand. Ceramic figures of various kinds, with our names on them, and she also made a good number for future use but without names. As children, spouses of children and grandchildren came into our lives names magically appeared on those old ornaments and it is always with wonder when grandchildren find an ornament on our tree with their name on it. Those ornaments are now 30 years old and more, but they still go up every year. Children always help decorate the tree and are encouraged to add their own handmade ornaments some of those, too, are decades old. When finished, our tree is not the prettiest or neatest around, but it carries memories that are irreplaceable. It is not only a symbol of all that makes up Christmas but of the good times from years ago. Our tree is special to us, and something that always reminds us of what the True Meaning of Christmas really is - the love and sharing of Christmas. Some of our traditions are just that; traditions for no other reason than to remind us it is Christmas Day. These are just fun little things that mean Christmas is here. There is nothing special or meaningful about them; they just are after so many years of observing them. Ghost of Christmas Past, "A Christmas Carol" Source Helping to decorate the house, this little guy found a particularly intriguing decoration and.. Source Christmas movies are a staple through December, watching as a family with the young ones. Decorating our home is again a family tradition. Children are enlisted to help put window decorations up while Dad puts a few lights on the house. Our feeling on outside decorations is that we need not make the most lavish display around, but that we do need to participate in the neighborhood decoration. It adds to the enjoyment of all, friends and neighbors, acquaintances and strangers, as the magic of Christmas blooms everywhere. Santa Claus plays a part in our Christmas; we find no harm in the idea of Santa Claus and feel that it adds to the magic and wonder of Christmas for the children. For us, Santa fills the stockings put up Christmas Eve, drinks the milk and eats the cookies left for him. He leaves many of the gifts that magically appear late Christmas eve, long after the children are in bed. Other gifts come from Mom and Dad, brother and sister, but Santa always brings some too. Cooking begins for Christmas day, with children helping to make cookies and candies - that evening or the next day they get to offer everyone some of their own work. Christmas morning is special for the children, with all those exciting gifts! I will leave you cookies and milk. I would like a doll with a bottle. And a pet unicorn. Love, KK Source Christmas and Children This article is getting a little long, but mention must be made of the children, the little ones in our lives. While adults can enjoy this time of year it is truly a time of magic and wonder for children. Beginning with Santa Claus Christmas comes alive to children. Everywhere they look they see signs of Christmas. The wait is interminable, but also adds to the experience as we talk about Christmas, watch the movies and take them to find gifts. Yes, when Christmas morning finally comes and they find gifts left by Santa and finally get to open all these neat things is the culmination of that waiting, but the entire season can and does bring wonder and magic into their lives. It can become a period of extra time with Mom and Dad never a bad thing! While not always easy the season is also one of extra duties, work and often stress that extra time and love we lavish on our children is important to their understanding and enjoyment of Christmas. While Christmas is a season for everyone to enjoy, there are also times of the season that we dedicate to our children. Christmas morning opening gifts is one such period and continues through the morning playing with the new toys. Taking our children Christmas shopping, seeing Santa in the stores or parade, taking the extra time to help our children "help" us prepare for the holidays - these are all things that make Christmas so magical to our kids. It is many meanings to us. It means sharing of ourselves with others. It means giving to others that need our help. It means reviving the old traditions that we have formed over the years and remembering our past. It means promoting and participating in the magic and wonder that children find in Christmas. It is a time of love and generosity. Most of all, though, our Christmas tradition is that Christmas is a time of family. Without family Christmas would be a pale shadow of what it is. Christmas means family to us.
