My Toughest Decision Mistakes, mistakes, mistakes. No one saw mine coming. Overall, I was a really good kid. I played softball and ran cross-country. I had, and still have, aspirations of becoming a doctor. If someone would have told me that at the age of fifteen I would become pregnant, I would have said they were crazy. Why would anyone do something so foolish? October 11, , was the day my daughter was born. I took one look at her, and it was love at first sight. It was so overwhelmingâ€”a flood of emotions that I have never experienced. I loved her in a way that could only be described as unconditional. I looked at her, and in my heart I knew that I could not give her all the things that she needed and deserved to have, no matter how badly I wanted to. Physically, emotionally and in every other way, I was not capable of being a mother. I knew what had to be done. Putting all my emotions aside and doing what I felt was best for my daughter, I decided to give her up for adoption. My very soul ached. Even though I still get to see my daughter because I am blessed with having an open adoption, the pain is still there. I can feel it burning inside me every day, when I think about Katelyn. I only hope that when she gets older, she realizes how much I love her. I love her more than anything in the world. I know in my heart that I made the right choice. I just wish with all my heart that it was a choice I never had to make. Chapter 2 : Soul Decision Lyrics

Decision-Making from the Soul is a holistic decision-making process that will help you design decisions that free your authentic self, inspire you intellectually, energize your body, and renew you emotionally.

What is the human soul? The Bible is not perfectly clear as to the nature of the human soul. But from studying the way the word soul is used in Scripture, we can come to some conclusions. Simply stated, the human soul is the part of a person that is not physical. It is the part of every human being that lasts eternally after the body experiences death. The human soul is central to the personhood of a human being. You are a Soul. You have a body. A soul is what is required. The human soul is distinct from the heart Deuteronomy The human soul is created by God Jeremiah It can be strong or unsteady 2 Peter 2: We know that the human soul needs atonement Leviticus Jesus is the great Shepherd of souls 1 Peter 2: For you will not abandon my soul to Sheol, or let your holy one see corruption. Jesus, as the Son of Man, has a soul. There is often confusion about the human spirit vs. In places, Scripture seems to use the terms interchangeably, but there might be a subtle difference. It is repeatedly shown as a mover, a dynamic force e. It has been said that there are only two things that last: That thought should be both sobering and awe-inspiring. Every person you meet is an eternal soul. Every human being who has ever lived is a soul, and all of those souls are still in existence somewhere. The question is, where?

Chapter 3 : Decisions: The Heart and Soul of the Organization | Leading Resources, Inc

The Soul Decision is a collection of poetry presented in a trilogy of work, In Awe of the Journey and including the previously published poetry from The Nature of Darkness and Inspired by Their Spirits.

This is clearly and definitely proved by the Word of God. In addition, Psalm This concern must be something considered in the mind. By these verses we can be clear that the mind as the organ to know, to consider, and to remember is a part of the soul. These passages prove that the will must be a part of the soul. This is, of course, to make a decision. That the soul makes a decision also proves that the will is a part of the soul. This chapter in Numbers deals with vows made to the Lord. Since we must make a decision to bind our soul to vow to the Lord, this also proves that the will must be a part of the soul. It would be good for the brothers and sisters, especially the young ones, to remember all these verses. They should pick up the burden to learn this. The Emotion Being a Part of the Soul The emotion comprises many things, including love, hatred, joy, and grief. Song of Songs 1: This proves that within the soul there is the organ, the function, of the emotion. Despising in the soul is the hatred of the soul. Since these are emotions, this also proves that the emotion must be a part of the soul. Joy is a great part of the emotion. This again proves that the emotion is a part of the soul. These verses tell us that the desire of the emotion is something in our soul. In addition, 1 Samuel The verses of the Scriptures above are the ground to say that within the soul there are three parts—the mind as the leading part with the will and the emotion. These are the best verses to prove this, but they are not the only ones. If we study the entire Scriptures, it is hard to find anything other than these three parts in the soul. These three parts comprise all the functions of the soul. With God there are three persons, with man there are three parts, and with the soul there are also three inward parts. In addition, the spirit is of three parts, or functions. According to the Scriptures, the tabernacle and the temple were of three parts. In the building of God, three is a basic figure. The ark of Noah had three stories, and in the tabernacle there are many threes. The width of a standing board, for example, was one and a half cubits; two boards in a pair were a whole measurement of three cubits. This proves that we can never be independent. We always need another half, just as the Lord Jesus sent His disciples two by two. By ourselves we are one and a half, but two together make three cubits, a whole unit. The three functions of the spirit are the conscience, the fellowship, and the intuition. It is easy to understand what the function of the conscience is, which is to know right and wrong and to condemn or justify before God. It is also easy to know what the fellowship is, which is for us to commune with God, to contact God. Within our spirit there is a function, or a part as an organ, which we have so that we can fellowship with God, commune with God, and contact God, or simply put, touch God. It is not as easy, however, to know what the intuition is. It is a direct sense or a direct knowing. In our spirit there is such a part that many times has a direct sense, regardless of the reason, circumstance, background, or environment. We call this organ, or this function, the intuition of the spirit, with a direct sense and direct knowledge from God.

Published on November 13, Decisions are the atoms of every organization. Every new product launched, every new service offered, every process made more efficient and reliable is a result of hundreds of decisions. Effective leaders view their worlds through this lens, rather than through the lens of hierarchies, org charts, or chains of command. To build high levels of trust, teamwork, and innovation, effective managers focus on clarifying decision-making responsibilities. Effective leaders and managers are constantly on the lookout for opportunities to clarify decision-making authority. This means difficult conversations often need to occur. First of all, it means clarifying for people their precise decision-making role, which sometimes translates into less responsibility than they think they have. The manager of a large publishing company asked me to lunch one day and said: What do you see as the most important thing I need to do? Which decisions do you want to make? Which are you delegating to others? They fail to design decision processes with the right sequence of goal setting, data collection, input gathering, stakeholder engagement, and brainstorming. As a result, they fail to leverage themselves as leaders. Either they go too far or not far enough in empowering others. They fail to achieve the optimum balance of engagement and efficiency in making the decision. There are five types of decisions: Each implies dramatically different roles for the people involved. See our tool, The Five Types of Decisions. In deciding to purchase a new IT system, for example, a team may be delegated responsibility to reach consensus on a recommendation to forward to the senior management team, where the decision will be made consultatively by the CEO, who will in turn take the plan to the board for a final, ratifying, democratic vote. To manage the decision well, this process needs to be well understood by everyone. By being transparent about the process, you can help people be more effective and efficient. Rather, it can reach consensus on the two best options and forward those for their consideration. Consider the decision to open a new store in an international chain like Starbucks. A location scout is delegated responsibility for identifying potential new locations. The scout forwards these potential locations to a regional manager. The regional manager delegates to a planning team the job of studying these locations and developing business plans for sites the team thinks are worth pursuing. This planning team is composed of three people. A market analyst determines sales projections. A budget analyst prepares a budget for the location, showing both projected revenues and costs, including labor, rent, equipment costs, etc. A financial analyst develops a financing and ownership plan for the store. Each member of the team takes responsibility for his or her area. As individuals, they consult with their team. The team is directed to reach consensus on any recommendation to open a new store. The team develops a business plan that includes all the information related to projected sales revenues, costs both capital and operating , plus an ownership and financing plan. Once its recommendation is complete, the team forwards the business plan to the regional manager for her to review and approve or disapprove. At that point in the process, the team plays a consultative role. Once the regional manager approves the plan, she forwards it to the regional vice president for a final decision. Decision maps are a powerful tool. Every nested decision can be depicted visually so people can grasp the multiple steps in the process and their particular role in it. Sometimes the same person may wear two hats: Clarifying the decision processâand continuing to manage the communication during the decisionâis the essence of managing decisions well. Defining the roles of external stakeholders in a decision is also important. In many of our planning processes, we gather input from stakeholders at the beginning of the process and then bring a draft plan to stakeholders for further input before it is finalized. They reciprocate by taking more responsibility for their part of the process. Want to learn more about how to effectively manage decision processes?
