Small is the gate and narrow the road that leads to life, and only a few find it. Matthew I have a beautiful autumn photograph of a young man on horseback in the Colorado mountains as he contemplates which trail ahead to follow. It reminds me of Robert Frost's poem "The Road Not Taken."

Those who appreciate inspiring coastal scenery should take a short drive or bus ride from the Blue Grotto in Wied iz-Zurrieq to the Dingli Cliffs. The appeal and the drawback of this location is its remoteness. The sheer meter Dingli Cliffs drop off dramatically into the Mediterranean Sea, and the sloping hillsides are fertile land used by small farms. The highlight of Dingli Cliffs is the viewpoint that offers breathtaking seaside panoramas. Besides a short walking trail, there is nothing at Dingli Cliffs except a tiny hilltop chapel closed to the public that is devoted to Saint Mary Magdalene. Sometimes tourists will find a pop-up souvenir and refreshment stand. Dingli Cliffs does not have a visible bus stop ask the bus driver where to get out and buses run infrequently, but the spectacular photo-ops make it worth the trek. Golden Bay Beach is easily accessible by car or bus; the bus stop is only a five-minute walk away from the beach. Unlike other beaches in Malta, Golden Bay Beach is far away from street traffic, which makes it a relaxing seaside escape. The beach has an extremely wide shoreline with soft golden sands. The waters are clean and gentle enough for swimming, with an extensive area roped off for safety. Many visitors spend the day here sunbathing while listening to the soothing sound of waves lapping against the shore. Lounge chairs and beach umbrellas are available for rent, and the site has well-maintained facilities including public toilets and changing rooms. Surrounded by cliffs and sloping hillsides, the beach is accessed by climbing down steps. Ghajn Tuffieha Bay Beach feels secluded in nature, except for the umbrellas and lounge chairs for rent, public restrooms, and a snack bar. The waters are safe for swimming except when the red flag is up indicating strong currents. Continuing seven more kilometers from Ghajn Tuffieha Bay is Gnejna Bay, a small protected bay surrounded by steep limestone cliffs. Hike down a flight of steep steps to the gorgeous beach of orange sand. This beach is popular with swimmers and snorkelers. Water ski and canoe rentals are also available as well as public restrooms and food stands. Between Ghajn Tuffieha Bay and Gnejna Bay is the rural village of Mgarr in a pastoral landscape of vine-covered hills and small farms. Outdoorsy types will enjoy the scenic hiking trails from Mgarr into the countryside and along the coast to Gnejna Bay. Nearby are ruins of Roman baths and ancient cart ruts grooves in the limestone plateau that intrigue scholars and visitors alike. The beach is next to a busy road, which detracts from the natural beauty. However, many visitors favor Mellieha because it has the largest stretch of sandy shore on the Maltese Islands with a one-and-a-half kilometer shoreline of fine white sand. Mellieha Bay has very gentle shelving, which makes it shallow enough to stand even quite far away from the shore. Families with young kids appreciate this beach because of its calm waters with no undercurrents, making it safe for children to wade or swim. Kids will also love the Popeye Village in Mellieha. Known as a "European destination of excellence," the picturesque village of Mellieha stands on a craggy hilltop overlooking the pastoral landscape of rocky outcrops, vine-covered hills, and small farms. The village was established in although much of the town is more contemporary with many modern hotels. The Parish Church of Our Lady of Victory Parish Square is a lovely 19th-century Baroque building with a beacon-like position at the highest point in the village. The church possesses the icon of "Our Lady of Victories" that is paraded around town every year on August 30 for the Mellieha Village Festa. This lively festival features traditional marching bands and fireworks. The church also boasts works by Maltese painters such as the Shipwreck of Saint Paul painting by renowned artist Giuseppe Cali. Opposite the steps that lead down from the square is a mystical cave-shrine dedicated to the Madonna. An underground spring running through the cave is said to have miraculous healing powers. Mellieha also has wonderful bird sanctuaries in the Ghadira Nature Reserve. A Prehistoric Megalithic Site Share: Dating between BC to BC, the ancient site was buried under mounds of earth until its discovery in The facade, made up of two upright stones supporting one stone lintel, has a striking entrance. The prehistoric builders of Hagar Qim did not use a symmetrical layout of the three chambers. Instead, the chambers and apses connect with one another but not in a uniform plan. Each chamber was built almost as an individual place of worship. Artifacts found on the site including the tall headless Fat deities, believed to be symbols of fertility, and the nude Venus of Malta are on display at the Archeological Museum in Valletta. The little boulders, the size of bowling balls, strewn about the site were used like castors to move the massive megaliths into place.

Malta's Gastro Trail Malta's position in the Mediterranean Sea and year-round warm climate, allows visitors to experience alfresco dining on an array sea-food caught that day, enjoy the delicious local wines in the reputable bars and restaurants that fill the city and much more.

Leave No Trace Hike Checklist: There may also be more essentials, depending on the season and your needs. Keep in mind that fluid loss is heightened in winter as well as summer. Many of our hiking areas feature interconnecting network of trails. Check out some map-reading basics here. Nuts, seeds, and chocolate are favorites on the trail. Be prepared for changing weather. Avoid cotton--it traps water against your skin and is slow to dry. If you are wearing wet cotton and must return to your starting point, you risk getting chills that may lead to a dangerous hypothermia. Check the batteries before you start out and have extras in your pack. Know how to use the basic components. A firestarter this could be as simple as leftover birthday candles that are kept inside a waterproof container and matches again, make sure to keep them in a waterproof container could save a life. Has the weather turned rainy? Did you drink all your water? Did your companion fail to bring rain gear? Are you getting tired? Keep in mind that until you turn around you are typically only half-way to completing your hike--you must still get back to where you started from! Exceptions are loop hikes. Check the weather forecast before you head out. Know the rules and regulations of the area. Prepare for extreme weather, hazards, and emergencies. Schedule your trip to avoid times of high use. Visit in small groups when possible. Consider splitting larger groups into smaller groups. Repackage food to minimize waste. Use a map and compass to eliminate the use of marking paint, rock cairns or flagging. Durable surfaces include established trails and campsites, rock, gravel, dry grasses or snow. Protect riparian areas by camping at least feet from lakes and streams. Good campsites are found, not made. Altering a site is not necessary. Concentrate use on existing trails and campsites. Walk single file in the middle of the trail, even when wet or muddy. Focus activity in areas where vegetation is absent. Disperse use to prevent the creation of campsites and trails. Avoid places where impacts are just beginning. Dispose of Waste Properly Pack it in, pack it out. Inspect your campsite and rest areas for trash or spilled foods. Cover and disguise the cathole when finished. Pack out toilet paper and hygiene products. To wash yourself or your dishes, carry water feet away from streams or lakes and use small amounts of biodegradable soap. Leave rocks, plants and other natural objects as you find them. Avoid introducing or transporting non-native species. Do not build structures, furniture, or dig trenches. Campfires can cause lasting impacts to the backcountry. Use a lightweight stove for cooking and enjoy a candle lantern for light. Where fires are permitted, use established fire rings, fire pans, or mound fires. Only use sticks from the ground that can be broken by hand. Burn all wood and coals to ash, put out campfires completely, then scatter cool ashes. Respect Wildlife Observe wildlife from a distance. Do not follow or approach them. Feeding wildlife damages their health, alters natural behaviors, and exposes them to predators and other dangers. Protect wildlife and your food by storing rations and trash securely. Control pets at all times, or leave them at home. Avoid wildlife during sensitive times: Respect other visitors and protect the quality of their experience. Yield to other users on the trail. Step to the downhill side of the trail when encountering pack stock. Take breaks and camp away from trails and other visitors. Avoid loud voices and noises.

Journalist assassinated in Malta was on trail through Baku that leads to Trump than Malta's newspapers, had implicated the Muscat government in the sale of.

When do you want to travel? The fine dining restaurant is passionate about using local and seasonal ingredients. Bahia dedicates its name to a prestigious navel orange that carries the pride of the people of Lija. Panorama Despite its location in the British Hotel, Panorama retains the flavour of the Mediterranean in its classic dishes. The view of the Grand Harbour of Valletta can be appreciated day and night. Sicilian Chef Massimo Marino leads the kitchen of Panorama and describes his particular cooking style as one that combines current cooking techniques with local fresh ingredients to create an innovative Mediterranean cuisine for diners to enjoy. Tarragon Tarragon is an award-winning establishment with deep roots in the Maltese gastronomy scene. It offers a casual atmosphere for guests to enjoy its Mediterranean fusion fare. Tarragon features the culinary expertise of chef Marvin Gauci, who is well-versed in molecular gastronomy and is responsible for attracting the attention of critics beyond the shores of Malta. The Harbour Club is located within this meticulously converted warehouse, with both indoor and terrace seating available. The team at The Harbour Club strives to incorporate elements into its Mediterranean dishes that remind diners of the renowned Grand Harbour and its rich history. The Barracuda Restaurant Located along the shores of Balluta and Spinola Bay, Barracuda offers outside tables where dinners can enjoy the ocean air while tucking into artfully crafted dishes, as well as inside dining in a restored 18th century villa. Chef Andrew Pace uses locally sourced and fresh ingredients to create his signature Mediterranean dishes. Adventures for a culinary mind Arnold Grech Meet Arnold Grech, the Beekeeper With over 65 years of experience in teaching, researching, and raising bees himself, Arnold Grech is a wise and respected Mediterranean man whose name brings fond memories to both locals and foreign visitors alike. His knowledge and passion for beekeeping is not lost in the flavour of the honey cultivated in his apiary in Mellieha. Malta is regarded as the land of honey, not merely by personal choice, but in the fact that its name is derived from the Greek word for honey, meli. Arnold is available for tours of his apiary, where he shares his experiences raising bees and making honey. For information to book click here. The Marsovin Summer Wine Festival This annual summer festival is held on the grounds of Hastings Gardens in Valletta – a location that attracts the gaze of both locals and foreigners alike due to its serene atmosphere and expansive views of Sliema harbour. To accompany a glass of locally-produced wine, guests may listen to live performances from Maltese artists while keeping a careful eye on the food stalls available. He is currently leading a project to encourage Maltese farmers to produce olives by purchasing his own indigenous bidnija olive trees aiming for an ambitious 30, trees actively growing. The olive farm located in Wardija is open to visitors and offers tours, tastings, and a typical Maltese lunch. Appointments must be made and are only available to small groups. San Pawl Milqi According to tradition, this archaeological site in burmarrad is where St Paul was able to recover after his shipwreck in Malta in ad The trapetum a rotating mill used to separate pips from olive oil , anchor points and two presses can still be seen, alongside a set of vats used to purify oil. Heritage Malta offers visitors the opportunity to see the largest roman agricultural plant on the island as well as the nearby chapel dated back to Xwejni Salt Pans The Xwejni Salt Pans are a site for harvesting salt during the summer period and is open for visitors to spend a pleasant afternoon. Despite the generational gap, the harvesters of Xwejni have relied on the most traditional means possible to produce salt of such high calibre. These salt pans are found along the Xwejni bay in Zebbug, Gozo. Wines, which is the highest wine certification for Maltese wines. San Niklaw San Niklaw Estate A small family estate made up of vineyards, an olive grove of trees and a boutique winery. The estate is open to visitors for private guided tours all year round.

Gioielleria Zampa has started accepting cryptocurrencies at its outlets. The first jewellery store in Malta to do so, this seminal development continues in the pioneering traditions of founder Giuseppe Zampa, who started the business way back in the 17th century.

Lakes and rivers characterize the lower areas along E11 Pine forest is typical for the whole area Ticks along E11 carry dangerous diseases Wolves are scarce and shy Adders are rare and easily overlooked The woodpecker is heard in every forest The giant hogweed causes a burning pain Perch abound in rivers and restaurants Wild boars are common in all wooded areas along E11 Ants are found along E11 Most of the original, pre-human landscape along E11 was formed in the last 14, years, i. The melting ice in Northern Europe caused huge rivers to carve out wide valleys, whilst the sea level rose significantly and flooded low land. It is known that the river Thames in England was once a tributary of the river Rhine on the continent; Britain was then not separated from the continent by the North Sea. In what is now known as the Netherlands and in the plains of now Northern Germany and Poland, rivers began to flow to carry the melted ice towards what became the Baltic Sea itself also a result of the rising sea level or the North Sea. These areas are now characterized by low-lying land, marshes, sandy old dunes now stationary hills alternating with older layers of peat. From the Dutch and German border to the Harz , however, E11 passes through a different and much older geological area. It consists of a range of low mountain ridges such as the Wiehen Hills and the Wesergebirge , created almost million years ago from marine sediments which started to rise. The Harz mountains themselves are even much older about million years according to academic estimates and stem from a variety of complicated geological processes. After the Harz, E11 drops back to the estuaries of the rivers in the plains. Large parts of the E11 cross through forests, for which sometimes considerable detours are made. Lakes and rivers are not uncommon along the trail. The trail can be walked at any time of year, but the Polish winter is long, with a lot of snow. The highest point of E11 is meters on the slopes of the Harz Mountains, whereas the lowest point is slightly under sea level in one of the polders in the West of The Netherlands. Apart from getting lost in the vast Polish forests, there seem to be few hazards other than the occasional wild boar or gray wolf , or even a rare Eurasian lynx. It is only at the end of a severe winter season, when the animals are hungry, that extra care must be taken. In the summer, one might tread on a poisonous adder and in any season one might be bitten by a rabies infected mammal. The one really big danger, however, is the almost invisible tick as it may be infected with tick-borne diseases , especially Lyme disease and tick-borne meningoencephalitis. There is archeological evidence that messengers and traders followed the range of low hills in what is now Northern Germany, thousands of years ago. Especially after the Middle Ages, the route became a backbone of East-West trade. Pedlars and other travelers preferred the dry and sandy ridge to the swamps to the North and South of it. At present, ramblers feel the same for a different reason: Route map of the Marskramerpad Parallel to the extension of the European Union to the East, the E11 was extended over the existing network of Polish local and regional hiking trails. The extension of the E11 to Moscow through Lithuania and Latvia has not so far been possible, due to the absence of rambling organizations in the three countries involved. The Dutch section of E11 is known as the Marskramerpad "Peddlers Way" , paying tribute to those who walked through the centuries along the same track. Like most Dutch long distance trails, the Marskramerpad is managed by Wandelnet, [4] where a detailed guide of the trail can be bought. It also crosses some of the most interesting towns and cities, including The Hague , Leiden , Amersfoort , Deventer and Oldenzaal. The metropolis of Berlin is crossed from Potsdam through the town centre to Friedrichshagen. It is marked by stickers with a white capital T on a black square, or by a simple T painted on trees and walls. It cruises slightly elevated above the surrounding agrarian land. Remarkable is that his long and brave resistance resulted in his appointment as the first Duke of Saxony under Charlemagne. The building is placed in such a way, that even today, all who pass in a train or on the motorway, see it high on the slope that ends the Wiehengebirge. It follows the 50 kilometers of a regional hiking trail, the Wesergebirgsweg, cruising over de crest of the next ridge, the Weser Uplands to the medieval town of

Hameln. E11 reaches a height of meters on Mount Hohe Egge, amidst of breath-taking rocks and ancient forests. The latter township offers the last possibility for shopping before E11 climbs the next ridge, the Ith and remains on its crest over its full length. Although the mountain range offers summits of meters and more the famous Brocken is over meters high, E11 does not climb higher than meters and keeps mostly to the lower parts of the northern slopes. It crosses through a few townships well known from early German history: Goslar junctions with E6 and Bad Harzburg. This resulted inter alia in a completely new extension of E11 through the federal state of Saxony-Anhalt. It passes Ilsenburg and Ballenstedt, finally breaks through the crest of the Harz Mountains which are hills rather than mountains here, and reaches the town of Lutherstadt Eisleben, the birthplace of Martin Luther, the church reformer, and bears his name in its official name. E11 near Sieglitz A further extension, long planned, but realized only in, leads E11 through mining and large-scale agricultural country to the Natural Park of the Lower Saale Naturpark Unteres Saaletal. This remarkable town survived the Second World War almost undamaged and retains a great number of buildings reflecting Jugendstil, Bauhaus and other architectural styles. The path west of Halle is waymarked in the same manner as the previous parts, i. After Halle, E11 climbs the lonely hill of Petersberg and continues through flat, open land. The scenery reflects both the large scale of agrarian enterprises in the new federal states as well as the influence of Brandenburg-Prussian nobility in the 18th and 19th centuries. E11 reaches the city of Dessau, the cradle of Bauhaus architecture, then plunges into the interesting Biosphere Reserve of the Middle Elbe. It passes Coswig and enters the forest around Senst. Shortly after this village, E11 reaches the border with the federal state of Brandenburg. After Halle, E11 is waymarked according to the traditional system in former communist Europe: The trail continues through vast hunting forests, which were the property of the Brandenburg-Prussian nobility in the 19th century and served as a green belt around Berlin and Potsdam in the 20th century. About 20 kilometers before Potsdam, E11 reaches the first of a score of lakes bordered by many former East German holiday resorts, some of which are still in use. E11 sneaks through one of the hottest spots on the former border of West Berlin, Klein Glienicke. This little settlement, enclosed by water and divided by an indented border, was packed full of spies by both superpowers during the Cold War. The Glienicke Bridge witnessed the opening and subsequent fall of the Iron Curtain in This part of Berlin is rich in historical castles, including the winter residence of the Prussian kings, who also founded a few museums here. Most of the famous museums of Berlin are, however, found in Mitte the historical center of Berlin and also the center of the former East Berlin. E11 does not pass here, but follows an old trail in West Berlin along the River Spree and the Landwehr Canal, thus missing the most interesting parts of East Berlin and present-day Berlin. E11 lingers leisurely between the River Spree and a few recreational parks and then crosses the river by ferry into a vast area of town houses and bungalows to Friedrichshagen. From here, the rambler may choose a more western trail over the hills of Lebus to Jacobsdorf or, more to the East, the trail that, after the village of Reitwein, follows the River Oder to the South. This part of E11 is described in the German language, [10] A list of addresses which offer lodgings for the night en route, also in German, is found in specialized bookshops in Germany. It is strongly advised to carry a city plan of Berlin when walking from Potsdam to Neuenhagen. Locally bought topographical maps will do for the rest of the trail in Brandenburg. As Poland is rather thinly populated, rambler without tents must be prepared for daily distances between 25 and 35 kilometers. The trail rather jumps from one existing trail to another, generally after following such a trail for only a short distance. The regional trails are marked, however, although not always well enough to enable the rambler to follow E11 without a map. So one must fall back on documents describing which sections of which trails make up E Unfortunately, these are hardly accessible or are incomplete: A German book, now out of sale, and summarizing the routing of all eleven European long distance paths. Two kilometers out of town, E11 curbs left toward the little village of Drzecin, where the first white-yellow-white markings are found. These lead in a few days to Lubniewice, where the markings change to white-blue-white. The former staff quarters now function as a hotel, where the hiker may rest as a Soviet general. This dates back to, when democratic Germany the Weimar Republic felt the need to defend itself against a possible attack from the East with a so-called Ostwall. The spot offers now the unique possibility of following E11 underground. The city has bus and train connections with various townships on E11 and may be used as a pleasant station for two or three days of walking without much luggage. The city has an interesting regional museum and a lively score of restaurants and bars. Many monuments remind of this tragedy, but unfortunately the explanatory texts are in Polish only. In Bukowar the markings change to white-red-white and in Obrzycko to white-green-white. After this point, E11 is not defined, but the obvious choice of a rambler interested in one of the oldest, biggest and most beautiful town centers along E11 is to turn right South toward Rynek Jezycki. This tourist trail ends at the medieval little Church of St. Lodgings and buses back to town are found just across the border of the city in Gruszczyn. E11 passes over a tar road through a nondescript area of small businesses and workshops related to agriculture. Later, it ventures into forest until finally all black or green markings leave the path and die somewhere in the forest and the dunes. One should rather follow the nearby tar road to the North, to the township of Pobiedziska , where E11 is found back. Away from the track, to the West of the town, open-air museum Skansen welcomes visitors with miniature copies of buildings from a wide area. This is from now on the colour of E11 over more than kilometres. Along a swampy lake and a crossing in the main road 5 at the crossing a road sign says that it is now Here E11 has been forced to make place for a motorway. Old and beautiful houses and other buildings around the central square testify of an interesting past, whilst decaying factories refer to the recent communist past. The university offers the most lively corner of the town. The white-red-white marks of E11 lead along the most interesting churches, museums and other sites, and finally to the railway station. The trail follows the road parallel to the tracks to the Northeast and turns then right into a tunnel under the railway. After another right turn, it passes through a modern industrial area, older residential quarters and a surprisingly wild patch of forest. The red markings lead through open agrarian land to the long-stretched industrial village of Trzemeszno. The trail passes in front of the railway station, crosses the tracks a little further, and reaches Mogilno via the village of Wydartowo. The white-red-white stripes die out in Mogilno. E11, now invisible, turns right in the little park around the lake, not far from the railway station, and immediately right again, to follow the waterside toward the medieval Benedictine monastery. E11 turns left East to the lonely motel of Goryszewo Kwieciszewo , where the first white-red-white stripes since Mogilno are found. The trail passes through Jeziorki and follows a sandy dirt road to Strzelno. James follows more or less the same route as the E11, so that the yellow and blue shells yield an alternative marking to reach Polanowice. A rustic tree lane brings the rambler to Kruszwica , a provincial town with some interesting churches, but no clue where E11 and the Way of St.

Malta Trails has been promoting healthy lifestyles and fitness in Phillips County since The Malta Trails mission statement is 'Creating a healthy community, one trail at a time. In the first trail was completed with all community donated materials, equipment and labor.

Wish it was longer October, by slipsoup This is a great trail. The surface goes from paved to crusted stone. Both are equally smooth. A journey on this trail makes for a nice fall foliage ride. Also, the quaint town of Round Lake is worth a stop. We rode from the Oak St. Parking area at terminus on Oak St October, by zoetoaster Not sure if this has been mentioned in previous comments, but the trail was extended another couple of paved miles to the north to Oak Street in Ballston Spa. There is on street parking on this dead end lane. There is also a two mile spur trail, signed, about midway which runs through the woods to US Route 9. I concur with the many reviews I have read, the trail is well maintained and is fairly well shaded. Beautifull Ride August, by joeianniello Perfect day, with no negatives. Trail is not completely paved. But these areas are smoother like glass than a lot of paved roads. Would not attempt with a road bike tire of 23mm, if wet. However, most of it is paved and wide. May, by computerbensturm Fantastic Trail, a great portion of it was shaded which works really well for those hot summer months! Enjoyable April, by shannonschyberg I took my dog to this trail yesterday. It was well maintained, and pretty enjoyable! Shady on the hottest days of summer September, by lauriann From one terminus to another, this is a mostly shady trail, with exception of a mile of a half mile of so in the Curtis Lumber Industrial area. Observe caution at the intersection of Eastline - a very busy area. A lovely side trip is into Round Lake Village to admire the small gardens and small Victorian homes. Courteous cyclists and walkers everywhere. My only negative comment is that from one end to the other, I can count on passing through at least five areas with a strong sewage smell. It has been that way for five years with no improvement or resolution. Great for a family bike outing April, by melb We have young kids, ages and we enjoyed biking on this trail in small sections. There were plenty of stopping points including a playground and a park and a Stewarts for a snack. Just a good trail for inexperienced riders and a leisurely bike ride. Gentle grades with some nice scenery. Not dangerous for little children or adults! I look forward to biking here again soon. An Easy Ride - nice way to unwind I posted the photo in the gallery. More PICs and an old Railroad map on my blog: We had great weather with a nice breeze, which always makes a big difference. The bugs were not bad at all on this occasion. The sewer smell from a previous listing was present in one area, but tolerable until we could pass through. We peddled south from the Shenantaha Creek Park down to English Rd, total round trip approximately 9 miles, total time with breaks about 1hr 15min. Overall we were very satisfied, and agreed we would return again. Unfortunate experience July, by magseg My wife and I tried this trail this past Saturday. Unfortunately we have encountered the worst insect situation ever. We are not strangers to dealing with insects on our biking adventures, but nothing can compare to what we discovered on this trail. We parked in Shenantaha Creek park and tried riding in both directions from the parking lot. Both attempts ended with the same result: As we were riding I could see a brown cloud of them chasing my wife. This felt like a scene from a horror movie. I do think that this infestation is related to the sewer smell rather than to the simple fact that the path runs through woods. Once we rode past the village of Round Lake and off the section where the asphalt ended, I actually saw a sign that said something about the sewer. I stopped to make a picture of the sign, but insects took this opportunity to attack me with all the viciousness they could muster. Therefore I had to hop back on my bike and pedal to get out of there as fast as I could. The next day we rode Warren County Bikeway, which turned out to be completely insect free, even though the terrain was similar. In fact, none of the trails we rode recently were this bad. We go on Saddle River Park trail often: One weekend ago we tried the Dutchess Rail Trail - even though it was also hot and humid we encountered curious individual insects and not aggressive swarms. This leads me to believe that the problem is individual to the Zim Smith trail rather than the season or the terrain. Even though the scenery is nice and the pavement is in good condition - even the non-paved section is comfortable to ride on a road bike - we will avoid this trail. Pleasant and scenic trail October, by bram28 This trail is very pleasant and scenic.

Biked south to just past Round Lake: Biking around Round Lake was fun too. Unfortunately, signage is not very clear. The path goes north to close to Ballston Spa, but coming from Ballston Spa we could not find the beginning I ended up getting back on the path at the Underpass Rd, and then followed the path north to the end, where it ended up at Oak St off of East High. Also, the map currently on TrailLink does not show that northern section. The best section by far is that south of Shenentaha Creek Park, which winds its way mostly through dense woods and some wetlands, and also past the village of Round Lake which is made up of dozens of Victorian cottages - a wonderful village to cycle around in for a short diversion from the trail. The last 3 miles of the trail south east of Rt. Indeed, I passed several people on road bikes on that section of the trail. The total length of the trail is now 8. It has been extended north from what is indicated on the map on this web site, to just outside Ballston Spa, a bit shy of E. Ballston Spa is a great village, containing dozens of large, restored Victorians in its Historic District. There are also numerous shops and restaurants in the downtown area. However, traffic is very heavy, and it is not for the inexperienced or faint of heart. I start out at Coons Crossing and the mile markers are only marked to Round Lake It would be nice to mark the whole trail to Ballston Spa. Trail goes through to Ballston Spa February, by nukodyne This is one of my favorite trails for biking, running and rollerblading. The northern end was completed last fall and now connects to Ballston Spa. I can now bike to my favorite tea house up there! Some paving has gone on south of Round Lake to just before the bridge at Rt. I hope that is the end of the paving in that direction as the firm gravel trail at the southern end is wonderful for running. In the spring when the orchards on the hills bloom, the combination of fragrance and sunrise over the mountains cannot be beat. Progress toward Balston Spa August, by jtorriani I was on the trail yesterday and work is being done to extend the trail from underpass rd to Balston Spa. The bridge north of Underpass rd is paved and paving has been done north of the Bridge. Work has been done at the end of the trail. October, by funkylitcowgirl Hello, I am an avid horseback rider, and recently spoke with the Cornell Cooperative extension equine division and they said that the trail was open to horses. We have ridden the trail twice this year, and it is beautiful! There is limited parking, you might find some in Malta, and in Halfmoon. There is enough space for 1 trailer at the trail head in Ballston Spa, right on underpass road. That, and most of the trail is asphalt, so I would much rather walk on the grass anyway. So if you are a horse person, check it out! And please, respect the trail and use common sense so not to ruin it for others. Thank you and happy riding!! There appears to be a bridge north of underpass rd that is still not completed. Once the bridge is completed the trail will be about an other mile longer into Balston Spa. The completed trail is 7. There are few road crossings. Unfortunately there are no signs directing people to where the trial begins. The original trail has been regraded and fully paved. In addition, the trail has been extended to the North for approximately another mile. However, this new section of the trail is unpaved but hard packed. Still road bikes and mountain bikes can easily ride the additional section of the trail. For additional details on the trail, see my previous post for a great ride on the Zim Smith Mid-County Trail.

Best cliffs on Malta island. Guaranteed beautiful views from cliffs, steep uphill and downhill, high temperatures and experience of wilderness. Most of this path is path leads on the edge of high cliffs.

Stop along the way and take a stroll. Visit the refuge office and nearby shelterbelt, pond and short trail leading to a photo blind. Back to Top Field Notes Far from people and close to wildlife, experience the stark beauty of the plains. Gaze at nearby pronghorn out your car window. Watch the courtship flight of Longspursâ€™ called skylarking. Migrating waterfowl by the tens of thousands rest, court and breed on Lake Bowdoin, once an oxbow of the pre-glacial Missouri River. Birders have recorded more than species. The refuge is an Important Bird Area, as well as home to more than 26 species of mammals and several kinds of reptiles and amphibians. Researchers are studying the uncommon sparrow on the refuge to find out what it needs to survive. The sparrow depends on the grass litter for nesting, so if too much grazing eliminates old grasses, this songbird cannot nest successfully. Named for a long abandoned railroad siding town near here, only the grain elevator remains, which you can see from the auto tour route on the eastern lake shore. Stop 4 on the self-guided auto tour takes you to a much older human era. Walk out on a hill to see a ring of stones, signifying a tipi site. The lakes and marshes of Bowdoin long attracted nomadic plains people of the Cree, Gros Ventres, and Assiniboine tribes. Back to Top Viewing Tip Stop by the refuge office before you start birding. A short trail leads to a photo blind overlooking a seasonal pond. The shelterbelts near the office are good places to look for warblers, flycatchers and white-tailed deer. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 7: Back to Top Best Seasons April-October with large concentrations of waterfowl in the spring and fall and an influx of shorebirds in late summer. June is the best time for viewing grassland songbirds.
