Canada's first-ever wine atlas - the complete reference guide to the country's vineyards and award-winning wines. While Canadian ice wine is now an international icon, a gamut of other Canadian wine varieties have surprised the world with their quality.

Early settlement[edit] At the time when the first Europeans arrived in the 17th century, the Detroit River region was inhabited by the Huron , Odawa , Potawatomi and Iroquois First Nations. It is the oldest continually inhabited European-founded settlement in Canada west of Montreal. The current street system a grid with elongated blocks reflects the Canadien method of agricultural land division, where the farms were long and narrow, fronting along the river. Today, the northâ€”south street name often indicates the name of the family that once farmed the land where the street is now located. The street system of outlying areas is consistent with the British system for granting land concessions. There is a significant French-speaking minority in Windsor and the surrounding area, particularly in the Lakeshore , Tecumseh and LaSalle areas. It was later renamed Windsor, after the town in Berkshire, England. Today, this building is a community centre. The oldest building in the city is the Duff-Baby House built in 1791. It is owned by Ontario Heritage Trust and houses government offices. From the Illustrated atlas of the Dominion of Canada. Windsor was the site of a battle during the Upper Canada Rebellion in 1812. It was attacked by a band of Americans and rebels from Detroit; they burned a steamboat and two or three houses before being routed by the local militia. Underground Railroad Monument In 1812, Windsor had a population of about 1,000. Two steamboats offered service to Detroit. The barracks were still manned. There were various types of tradesmen, a bank agency and a post office. Many went across the Detroit River to Windsor to escape pursuit by slave catchers. The Windsor Police Service was established on July 1, 1854. They are now historic neighbourhoods of Windsor. Ford City was incorporated as a village in 1854; it became a town in 1856, and a city in 1857. Walkerville was incorporated as a town in 1857. Sandwich was established in 1857 as a town with no municipal status. It was incorporated as a town in the same year as neighbouring Windsor. These three towns were annexed by Windsor in 1858. The nearby villages of Ojibway and Riverside were incorporated in 1859 and 1860 respectively. Both were annexed by Windsor in 1861. Rum-running in Windsor was a common practice during that time. On October 25, 1862, a massive gas explosion destroyed the building housing the Metropolitan Store on Ouellette Avenue. Ten people were killed and at least one hundred injured. It also recalled the naming controversy in 1854 when Windsor aimed to become a city. The most popular names listed in the naming controversy were "South Detroit", "The Ferry" from the ferries that linked Windsor to Detroit , Windsor, and Richmond the runner-up in popularity. Windsor was chosen to promote the heritage of new English settlers in the city and to recognize Windsor Castle in Berkshire, England.
