So many good ones this year! There are some big announcements at the end of the video, so make sure to check them out! As always, I invite instant noodle makers to contact me so I can try your noodles! This dish came to be when US troops shared their rations with the locals during the Korean War. The noodles here are thick and chewy, the broth slightly spicy and has a nice oiliness. Augmented by a sachet of oil that smells like hot dogs and garnish which includes sausage, beans and macaroni, this is a unique and really great variety! The noodles are plentiful and have a very nice chew. The flavor is really great – tasty and full of shallot and scallion flavor. First, these noodles are very good – nice chew and round gauge. Next, the broth is just perfection; a creamy pork tonkotsu broth, savory and rich, is enhanced by the addition of black garlic oil. Everything harmonizes together perfectly. In , the Wholegrain version entered into the list – and with good reason. The noodles are hearty and have a kind of rustic, artisan mouth feel. They are perfect for the broth – a thick lavish curry which come from a huge sachet of paste and is made wonderful with lots of coconut milk powder. The noodles are just right – great gauge and chew and perfectly plump. The broth is thick and strong. Spicy flavor, heavy on the lemongrass and lots of shrimp taste. Well, the noodles are very good – they look like your basic instant but they really have a nice feel and chew. The broth comes from a curry pasta, coconut powder and a special dipping sauce. You can put the sauce in a spoon and dip it into the broth or you can just put it all in. Creamy and rich – this is excellence. Well, Nissin Singapore just changed the name from Kitchen to Reborn. This is a dive into prawn land to be sure. First off the noodles are the same MyKuali has had in all their varieties – just perfect. The broth here is oily, thick and exploding with prawn flavor. Their regular non-wholegrain version was 1 in The wholegrain noodle has vaulted it up high – Really high. The noodle has a hearty chew and texture I love. The broth is a harmony is paste and coconut milk powder that has great taste and richness. It all comes together in a crescendo is flavor and texture which is masterfully delivered. I got to visit an instant noodle company in Thailand. I just hit my th review. I decided to include what I added to them this year – however note the products are scored before anything is added. The full video presentation. The pack version was spectacular as well! Great noodles enjoy their time in a sweet but not overly sweet sea of coconut and chicken flavor. It is very unique and compelling; a fascinator for the palate. Added hard boiled egg, baked chicken, coriander and seared sweet onion. The noodles have a broad, flat character with a very nice chew to them. The sauce coats the noodles completely – not too much, not too little. The balance of the Sichuan pepper to other flavors is masterful; it balances perfectly. The Sichuan pepper has a kind of effect like mint – if you eat mint and then draw breath over your palate, you get a cooling feeling. Added Chinese sausage, fried garlic and scallions. In fact, I believe the first instant noodle I reviewed when I started the site was a creamy chicken variety. The noodles remind me of Taiwanese varieties – thick and a little wide, but much softer. The broth is very elegant; more like cream of chicken soup – but with a rich and thick flavor. Added TVP gives it more umami and satisfies. Made in Sri Lanka for the Singaporean market. First, the purple noodles not only add a striking visual, they are of very high quality. The broth is very good – excellent tomato flavor with beef notes and a very gourmet texture. The best part are the large pieces of fresh tomato and beef; truly something to savor. A noodle with a perfect gauge and chew rests in a broth which is now legendary. Added Salad Cosmo mung bean sprouts, mint, tau pok, Dodo fish ball and sweet onion. It gives them a heartier chew and a rustic, almost artisan quality. Added coriander, Salad Cosmo mung bean sprouts, Dodo fishballs and tau pok. Again, we have the excellent gauge and chew of the noodles. The broth is a thick tom yum goong – strong shrimp, lemongrass and tomato notes abound as well as a lot more mushroom taste in this new recipe. The heat is there as well. Reminds me of our visit to Langkawi in Its second year on the top ten instant noodles list. Added Salad Cosmo mung bean sprouts, coriander and prawns. This one is really fantastic. The noodles are a nice gauge and of good character and quality. The broth is a very nice and thick curry – thickened with coconut cream powder instead of non-dairy creamer. The inclusion of the sambal is really great. The new recipe boosted its flavor to be stronger and richer. This is its second year on the top ten instant noodles list. Added Salad Cosmo mung bean sprouts and tau pok. The noodles as always are very good – great gauge and chewiness. The broth is just amazing – good thickness and so rich and flavorful with a sweet prawn flavor. Added Salad Cosmo mung bean sprouts, coriander, hard boiled egg, barbecue pork and prawns. The wholegrain noodle just improves this variety by leaps and bounds; giving it such a nice heartiness and rustic flavor and texture. The broth seems unchanged; a beautiful appearance; the oil like shimmering rubies in a cream colored sea. The flavor is rich and spiciness very accessible to most folks. Added Dodo fish ball and carved squid.

This recipe is filled with wholesome celery, carrots, and noodles, but made super simple by using rotisserie chicken so you can concentrate on taking care of the family when they need you most! Plus, scroll to the bottom for a great giveaway featuring Braun Thermometers an Amazon gift card to help you build your own Flu Survival Kit. I remember when I was a new mom, the world nearly stopped when my baby got sick for the first time. Sure enough the weather turned, and soon enough we were in the thick of cold and flu season. He was right under a year and when I picked him up I could just feel the heat radiating from him. The one thing I could do was take his temperature. That way I knew whether I was over reacting, you knowâ€ being that mom, or there really was something to worry about. My daughter battled a virus that landed us in the hospital for 3 days and my little one seems to pick up every little thing the other two bring home from school and activities. Studies show that I am not alone, as a matter of fact, three out of four moms, regardless of age, list pediatric fever as their number one concern. Fevers are just so scary. When my daughter had a high fever, our doctor kept in touch with me daily having me monitor her fever with an accurate thermometer to monitor the situation. We both felt confident that as long as we knew what her temperature was, we could make the right decisions for her care. I know that she got exactly what she needed to get better when she needed it. Having an accurate thermometer is just about what saves my sanity anytime my kids get sick. With just a degree making so much difference, it is pretty important that you know it is on point. We have had many models of thermometer, but this is hands down my favorite. What is really cool is that Braun technology captures twice as much body heat compared to traditional forehead products. This is the first time I have used an ear thermometer, and I really liked it! Best Homemade Chicken Noodle Soup Recipe We could talk about cold and flu season without talking about chicken noodle soup. It seems that no matter how sick my kids are, they always want to eat. This recipe is the only one you will ever need. It is so flavorful. It is packed with veggies, noodles, and rich chicken flavor. The best part is that for something so flavor packed, it is so simple to make! So there you go! The secret ingredient is really the rotisserie chicken for a few reasons. First, I really love the flavor and texture of rotisserie chicken. Using it in place of plain chicken breast already adds to the flavor, but to make it over the top, you start the soup by simmering the whole chicken in the broth. You take the entire chicken, bones and all, and put it right in your pot. This is also how you make chicken broth and why it has so much amazing flavor, so starting the soup off like this gives it a base of incredible flavor. The other thing that makes this soup a little extra special is the addition of cornstarch. Many of the chicken soup recipes I have tried or created over the years does not have this. The cornstarch helps to bring everything together and makes the broth of the soup just a touch thicker. I think this is great especially when you are sick because it gives your stomach something to hold on to. Sometimes when things are too watery it make me feel a bit nauseous, but when there is a bit more texture and weight it can actually feel a lot more settled on an empty stomach. Add this soup to a Braun thermometer and you have the beginnings of a pretty great flu survival kit!
