Translated by Ollie Richardson and Angelina Siard cross posted with http: This court also refused to resolve the issue of the status of Crimea. In the form of a handout to Ukraine, they made a decision obliging Russia to satisfy the cultural requirements of the population of the peninsula – including access to education in the Ukrainian language. But in Crimea there are already more possibilities to satisfy the Ukrainian cultural and language requirements including receiving an education than the number of people who are interested in them. Nevertheless, during the current year Poroshenko announced the submission of a similar claim in the same court. These processes have some small value as informational pretexts to spread the internal political propaganda and PR of the Kiev authorities. As for external propaganda, here the resources of Ukraine are so weak and the performers are so unprofessional that they will ruin even the most brilliant opportunity. And meanwhile, affairs hit a brick wall. Why does Russia mostly agree to participate in these processes except in examples that are too egregious? We will make two preliminary remarks. For example, they are asked: Secondly, there was never any unity in Europe when it came to Ukrainian judicial activity. It is clear that in this situation it is the Americans who have the right to be proud of authoring the idea about judicial war with Russia. It is they who prompted Kiev to do it, and it is also they who substantially neutralised the pressure the EU was putting on Kiev – by contrasting the French-German position with the position of their vassals from Eastern Europe. The answer lies on the surface. But the US never wanted to assume responsibility for the destruction of the acting world order. Meanwhile, the system of international justice always annoyed the US. They wanted to be the only judge and to be immune to the judgement of others. But if earlier this was a small trouble, then nowadays, when Washington has sharply weakened, this system became a threat. The hypothetical coercive delivery of American politicians and military personnel to the Hague and bringing charges to them within the framework of the ICC is still perceived by many as something exotic, but not as something absolutely impossible. International financial-economic sanctions against the US, separate American companies, and certain politicians also ceased to belong to the realm of fantasy. Control over the system of international justice slowly but surely slips from the grasp of the US and in three-five years time passes quickly it can become a threat to America and its leaders. Trump just continues this line. He changed tactics, and works more insolently and more openly. But this is the inevitable result of America losing control over the time factor. They are already working on borrowed time. They need to be in time before Zeitnot. If we look at the actions of Ukraine through the prism of the interests of the US, then we will find out that Kiev banally provokes Russia into refusing to recognise the competency of international legal proceedings in the most different domains. Eventually, Russia can be blamed for the existence of the dark side of the Moon, and God knows what else! But as soon as Russia refuses to recognise the jurisdiction of the International Courts of Justice, it will become possible to pin the responsibility for dismantling the system of international justice on precisely Russia. Two things work for Russia. Firstly, the judges understand that if they will make obviously illegal decisions, then their court will lose its international status. A new court with other judges may be created from the existing national courts to resolve political problems and economic disputes. The US obviously weakened and continues to lose its positions, while the countries that they declare as their enemies become stronger. Far-sighted people think about their future. Welcome to Daily Prayer, new friend. Prayers in Time of Troubles If you shop at Amazon. Then of Thy mercy, grant me a safe lodging, and a holy rest and a peace at last through Jesus Christ, our Lord. I give to you my anxiety and my fear, my depression and my doubt, for you have promised to take them if we only ask; and I take upon myself your burden, for it is light and your way is gentle. May I keep this in my heart and mind all this day. I acknowledge and believe, O Lord, that you give us the trials of this life for our chastisement, when we drift away from you, and disobey your will; deal not with me according to my sins, but according to your endless mercy, for I am the work of your hands, and you know my weakness. Grant me, I pray, your divine helping grace; endow me with patience and strength to endure my tribulations with complete submission to your will. You know my misery and suffering and to you, my only hope and refuge, I flee for relief and comfort; trusting your infinite love and compassion, that in due time, when you know it is for the best, you will deliver me from my troubles, and turn my distress into comfort, and I will rejoice in your mercy, and exalt and praise your Holy Name, O Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, Amen. Serenity Prayer God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change; the courage to change the things I can; and the wisdom to know the difference. Living one day at a time; Enjoying one moment at a time; Accepting hardships as the pathway to peace; Taking, as He did, this sinful world as it is, not as I would have it; Trusting that He will make all things right if I surrender to His Will; That I may be reasonably happy in this life and supremely happy with Him Forever in the next. Help us, O Father, by your grace to love and fear only you, and fill our hearts with cheerful courage and loving trust in you; through our Lord and Master Jesus Christ. The urge just to end my life wells up in me like an uninvited guest. I love you more than anything. I pray, give me the strength just to put one foot in front of another until this episode of depression gets past. Let me know that the pain is going to end at some point and just hold on until it passes. I cannot feel anything but the pain, but I know, in my mind and my spirit, that tomorrow or the next day or at least at some point, the suffering will end. I do not know why I am in so much pain, for you have forgiven me for my wrongdoing and there is nothing really so bad in my life that would cause me to want to kill myself. I have enough to eat and I will have a place to sleep. Lead to to an activity that will help me with my pain and bring me such comfort, Holy Spirit, as will allow me to resist this terrible temptation. I suffer for you, Lord Christ, for I know that you suffered even more than I do. I love you and kiss your broken feet. I will live for you, to show my love for you; for despite whatever sin I might commit this day, I know that you have put me here for some reason, even though I cannot find it or see it because of my psychological state. And thank you for my friends who are praying for me, for I know that at least one person on earth cares about me enough to petition you in my behalf. And I pray for healing, Lord. Let me see that my shame and guilt have been forgiven and destroyed by your sacrifice and your great power. I am clean and perfect in your eyes, and you love me. Heal me of some or all of this affliction of pain, if it is your will, I pray. Endow me with patience and strength to endure my tribulations with complete submission to your will. You know my misery and suffering. I flee to you, my only hope and refuge, for relief and comfort, trusting to your infinite love and compassion; that in due time, you will deliver me from all the trials of this life and turn my distress into comfort. I rejoice in your mercy. I exalt and praise your holy name, oh Father, Son, and Holy Spirit: As I seek work and assistance, give me strength not to be anxious when I seem to be going nowhere; give me patience not to despair when things look bleak; give me serenity to know you are here with me, helping me to carry my crosses each day. So that I may do Your will, for the salvation of souls and my eternal life. God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore we will not fear, though the earth should change, though the mountains shake in the heart of the sea; though its waters roar and foam, though the mountains tremble with its tumult. God is in the midst of the city; it shall not be moved; God will help it when the morning dawns. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. We remember those who have lost their lives so suddenly. We hold in our hearts the families forever changed by grief and loss. Bring them consolation and comfort. Surround them with our prayer for strength. Bless those who have survived and heal their memories of trauma and devastation. May they have the courage to face the long road of rebuilding ahead. We ask your blessing also on all those who have lost their homes, their livelihoods, their security and their hope. Bless the work of relief agencies and those providing emergency assistance. May their work be guided by the grace and strength that comes from You alone. Help us to respond with generosity in prayer, in assistance, in aid to the best of our abilities. Keep our hearts focused on the needs of those affected, even after the crisis is over.

Chapter 3 : Where Does George Tell Lennie To Hide

Misery Index: Trouble in Texas as Tom Herman begins second season with another flop. The last time the Longhorns were really good, this year's crop of high school seniors were in third grade.

Otherwise there could be no novelties at all. Kasparov was in zeitnot, and Nc2 and after Nf5 he had to spend more time on the clock. Mar Tomlinsky: However, strange as it may seem, it was I who managed to produce a surprise at the start. In any case, in the present game my opponent thought for over one and a half hours over his tenth move! But at that time it had remained unused. It was precisely this move, suggested in his day by my long time second, Igor Zaitsev, that plunged my opponent into deep thought. Previously Black had automatically taken on f3; Incidentally, I had played this in the fourth game of the match. Though this idea is not original, I was convinced it had not been played before in the present situation. Furthermore it is virtually impossible to prove even in post-mortem analysis that these moves are objectively strongest. Despite this, they help to solve the problems in the particular context of the game. They leave their imprint on the whole of the subsequent struggle; they give it its essential character. By detecting such moments in games by top players, you can dramatically increase your understanding of chess. After the well-known opening moves 1. The task that faces him is exceptionally complex. Kasparov found an outstandingly good solution, clearly the best solution to any opening problem in the entire match: Such moves are often conceived not in home analysis but over-the-board, under strong emotional pressure. Many commentators could not understand why Karpov never repeated his novelty after winning the game. The explanation is simple: Kasparov refuted the novelty over the board - his Qb3 is very powerful. And, actually, nobody repeated this variation after, even me. Great game, GK finding d3! The AK-GK matches were the best of all time. That knight was coming to e4 and then to the outpost at d2 - game over. His rich facial expressions are so amusing. I imagine it something like wide opened eyes followed by some head shaking with a couple of doubtful looks at his opponent in between. Certainly his hand approaching the board several times in order to make a move that would easily refute such a bad move. Then slowly getting into thinking that it might not at all be such a bad move. More head shaking to come during the next 90 minutes, for sure:
