This part goes through 3 separate tunnels right through the rock. We met up with Dave and Dianne who were camped near by for dinner. We had so much fun catching up we only got pictures of our appetizer and a cola I had that Eddyline makes themselves. It was very good. With some gross looking dip? They were roasted brussel sprouts and the dip was raspberry chipotle. We all liked it! We will see them again where we will both be in Creede. We had a nice group, RVsingles. We were going in a couple days and told them to come on in. Four of them joined us and the other 8 or so would come after we left. There was one gentleman traveling alone that had lost his wife a couple of years prior. He was very interesting and we enjoyed having him over for dessert one evening. He wanted to reciprocate, so the next night we went to his rig for pie. We exchanged info and hope to meet up with him while we are in Arizona. Off we went to Creede where we scored another great campsite. Most of the National Forest campgrounds close early here in Colorado, so we were very happy about this one - Rio Grande. On the way we took a little hike up to small lake near the summit of Cottonwood Pass. Really, should that still surprise me? Happens several times a week. You could see the clouds rolling in over the nearby mountain tops. The change of colors is starting to happen. The reds in the ground cover made for a nice Fall feeling. The winds were getting stronger and it was too cold for us to keep going for how we were dressed. Hopefully the weather will be nicer on the other side. Across from this old stage stop was an interesting sign about Mistletoe removal. We decided this would be a great place to hide a geocache. The weather is much nicer on this side of the mountains. We were picking up a quick cache when this cowboy rode up and was trailering his horse. Love their Welcome sign above. In October , prospector Jim Taylor panned some gold from Willow Creek, and carried it back to camp in a tin cup; he named the valley Tin Cup Gulch. Early Tin Cup was a violent place. The population declined when the mines were exhausted and the post office closed in I do like how people have hung onto the old buildings and try to refurbish them and keep the original outsides. Town Hall The weather keeps threatening to open up again. Very pretty cemetery surrounded by flooded creeks. This recent headstone amongst the old ones had lots of heart shaped rocks left on it. This was Labor Day and the town closes down after Monday.
