Use Not long ago, deciding which clubs to put in your bag was a simple proposition. The typical golfers set included three woods driver, 3-wood and 5-wood , 10 irons 2 through 9, pitching wedge and sand wedge and a putter for a total of 14, the maximum allowed under the rules. Its a little different these days. While the driver and putter remain constant, the rest of the set is up for grabs. The advent of the lob wedge and gap wedge means many golfers carry four wedges. Hybrid clubs have bumped the irons from most bags, and often the 5-wood as well. Lately, some golfers are choosing to replace every iron with a hybrid. While putting together a set may seem more complicated, greater flexibility allows you to fine tune your clubs to best meet your needs. Choosing clubs remains a matter of personal preference. Some golfers like the look and feel of traditional irons, while others find the hybrids larger, rounder head more appealing. Most golfers have a crossover point, where their preference for hybrids gives way to an inclination toward irons. For instance, you might like the performance of hybrids where the 3- through 6-irons would normally go, but prefer traditional irons in the higher lofts starting with the 7. Lets say you want to keep your conventional wedges, but are interested in going with hybrids below that. Give your current clubs and corresponding hybrids a side-by-side tryout. Hit 10 balls each with your 8-iron and an 8-hybrid, noting the accuracy, distance and quality of contact on every shot. Also, pay attention to your confidence level with the different clubs at address, how high the ball travels, and which club produces a more pleasing feel at impact. You may decide to stick with the regular irons. In the latter case, its possible to ditch your irons entirely. Thomas Golf offers complete sets of hybrids, numbered plus the pitching, gap and sand wedges. All-hybrid sets are becoming more and more common among golfers who find them easier to hit than conventional irons – even the shortest ones. How Many Should I Carry? One of the biggest changes in the world of golf equipment over the last decade or so is the rapidly growing popularity of hybrid golf clubs. Today, if you were to look into the bag of any random Tour player, you would likely see at least one hybrid club. Not every golfer uses them – but almost. It is safe to say that hybrid clubs have become an integral part of the golf landscape, and they will likely remain there for many years to come. The appeal of hybrid clubs is obvious from the very first time you try one. As the name would indicate, they combine some of the best elements from both fairway woods and long irons. Fairway woods are popular because they are relatively easy to hit, and can carry long distances. Long irons are popular for the control and lower ball flight that they generally offer the player. In a hybrid club, you can combine most – or all – of those benefits without having to deal with the drawbacks that both fairway woods and long irons come with. When it comes to hitting the ball a long distance while still being able to accurately hit the ball toward the target, hybrid clubs are a great option. Of course, you have to figure out what club or clubs you are going to sacrifice in order to make room for a hybrid or two. You probably already carry 14 clubs in your bag, which is the limit allowed under the rules of golf. That means, if you wish to add a hybrid, something else has to go. Naturally you will look to remove a fairway wood or a long iron to make space, but picking exactly which one can be a little tricky. In the end, you want to be left with a set of clubs that will give you the best chance to deal with the challenges you encounter on the course. Building a complete set, including hybrids, requires some forethought and specific consideration to the kind of player that you are. Once you evaluate the state of your current set of clubs, it should quickly become obvious where a hybrid would fit into the mix. Any golf instruction contained below is written from the perspective of a right handed golfer. If you are a left handed player, be sure to reverse the directions as necessary. Get Started with a Complete Inventory Before you kick one or more of your current clubs out of your bag in favor of a hybrid , you need to know exactly what each of these clubs is doing for you at the moment. While you might think that you know the capabilities of each of your clubs, it is best to work through this process just to be sure. To get started, make a list of the 13 full-swing clubs that you carry in your bag not counting the putter. You should be left with 12 clubs at this point. Now, over the course of your next few rounds of golf, make a note of the distance that you hit each shot during the round, along with the club that was used. You can quickly mark this information on your scorecard as you play. At the end of each round, compile all of the information onto a single sheet of paper or computer spreadsheet for easy review. Once a few rounds have gone by, you should have a clear picture of your expected distance for each of the 12 clubs in question. As you review this information, look for a gradual progression of distances throughout the bag. For example, if you hit your 3 wood yards, you should hit your 5 wood in the neighborhood of yards. Likewise, if you can hit your pitching wedge yards, you should be hitting your gap wedge around yards. Ideally, you will see an even progression from one club to the next all the way through the ball. In reality, however, there are probably a couple of spots in your bag where you have a couple of clubs going nearly the exact same distance. This is most-common with the long irons. Many amateurs, after completing this process, will find that they hit their three and four irons almost the exact same distance. That is a problem. Why use up two slots in your golf bag on clubs that go the same distance? You want to take advantage of every club that the rules of golf allow you to have. When two clubs go roughly the same distance that means that one of them might need to go away. You are likely to notice this problem not only in your long irons, but in your wedges as well. Commonly, amateur players will hit their pitching wedge and gap wedge within just a few yards of each other. One of those wedges should be dropped, and you can learn to cover all of the distances in that range simply by practicing the speed control in your swing. Work through the process described above and take a careful look at your results. If you find that you have two or more clubs that are serving basically the same purpose in your bag, those clubs are prime candidates to be removed in favor of a hybrid club. In order to justify making an equipment change of any kind, you should have a specific problem that you are trying to solve. As it relates to adding a hybrid club, what is the issue that you need to fix? Between your fairway woods and your long irons, where are you falling short? Only when you can answer this question clearly will you be able to pick out exactly the right hybrid club to solve your problem. As you certainly understand, long irons and fairway woods are among the most-difficult clubs for the average golfer to hit properly. Below are a few of the common complaints that amateur golfers have regarding the shots they hit with their long clubs. Review the list and see if any of them apply to your game. While it will always be harder to hit your long clubs straight than your short clubs, you still want to have a level of control over your fairway woods and long irons so you can put them in play on a consistent basis. After all, it can be a great help to use these kinds of clubs off the tee on short par fours and long par threes, but they wont do you any good if you cant hit them straight more often than not. Your swing determines where the ball ends up going, but switching to a hybrid club could make it a little easier for you to make an accurate swing that sends the ball right down the middle. Another issue that the average golfer faces is not being able to get their long shots high enough up into the air. When the ball stays too low to the ground, it is difficult to control once it lands. So, you might be able to hit the ball straight enough with your long irons, but you cant control them properly after they bounce when the ball flight is too low. Cant hit them off of the turf. It is one thing to be able to hit a fairway wood or long iron off the tee, but it is another thing altogether to hit good shots with those clubs right off the turf. If you would like to go for a par five green in two shots, you will need to be able to hit these clubs off the ground with confidence. Likewise, long clubs are often needed from the fairway when playing a long par four. Think about the recent shots that you have hit with your fairway woods and your longest irons. What do you like about those shots, and what do you wish you could change? Most likely, the answers to those questions are going to be different for the fairway woods as compared to the long irons. Most golfers have no trouble getting fairway woods up off the ground, but control is often an issue. On the other hand, you might be able to hit your long irons straight but that is only when you strike them well enough to get the ball up into the air. A hybrid club might be able to offer you the best of both worlds. It is important at this point to make a clear distinction between the limitations of your equipment and the limitations of your swing. What they can do, however, is improve the ball flight you achieve with your good swings. A bad swing is a bad swing, and no club is going to correct it. The whole point of adding hybrids to your bag is to maximize the results you get when you hit the ball well. If you are hitting long iron shots solidly, for example, and still not getting the kind of flight that you want, that is a key sign that it might be time for a club change. Which Clubs to Toss Out? Unless you decide to get rid of one of your wedges to make room for a hybrid, the choice is most likely going to come down to eliminating either a long iron or a fairway wood. That means that the spots you are going to open up for a hybrid most likely will come from the five wood, three iron, and four iron range. That is the spot in the bag that usually stands to enjoy the most improvement when a hybrid club is added to the mix. But which clubs do you get rid of? For the vast majority of amateur players, the best bet is going to be getting rid of one or more long irons. Your long irons are the hardest clubs in your bag to hit properly, and they require the most speed to get the ball up into the air nicely.

I was a freshman in college, brand new to sex, and all my friends, left and right, were exploring their anal pleasures with dildos. I started college a few months after Grindr hit the app store. We all quickly discovered sex via the glowing orange icons on our phones. This was my initial understanding of toys: Some toys, like the Ass Hammer see 28 , deliver mind-blowing sensations that a penis simply cannot replicate. Nothing will ever replace traditional sex – sex toys simply expand the experiential buffet of sexual pleasure to its true, limitless margin. As you begin your toy sexploration, you will find that, although there are endless naughty novelty stores in the world, good toys are surprisingly hard to find. You could scour the Internet or make expensive pilgrimages to your nearest big city to visit a sexual retailer catered exclusively to gay men – nearly every big city has one – or you could start with this list of 39 sex toys you have to try, some of which are for beginners and others for seasoned adventurers. Welcome to Toyland, and enjoy the ride. Glass warms as it touches your skin and becomes very slick with lube you can use any kind, silicone or water-based. Even better, clear glass allows you to see the sphincter opening around the toy. A Good Jack-Off Tool There are many kinds of masturbators and jacking tools from many different brands. Jack-off tools are useful for solo play as well as world-changing hand jobs from a friend. Nipple Clamps There are dozens of different companies that make nipple clamps. A standard kink supplier like Mr. S Leather in San Francisco has many on their website , but you can probably find some at your local novelty store. I know guys that have used clothespins, but I prefer using clamps designed explicitly for this purpose. The nipples are very erotic parts of the male body and, depending on the guy, very sensitive. S Leather are sure to rock your world. Double-Ended Dildo Sometimes, you both want to bottom. This smooth, black 18" double-header from Mr. Double-Ended Jack-Off Tool Mutual jacking off is one of the most romantic things you can do with another guy, and these make it easy. This one from AdamMale toys is one of the few I could find online. These have become somewhat harder to find online, so you might want to nab this one. Get on your knees on the bed, face to face, and stick your penises in. Kiss, make-out, and take turns stroking each other. Time your orgasms so that you both cum close to the same time, and hold a strong kiss while you do it. This one is made of pure silicone, so water-based lubes are recommended. If you use silicone lube, wash it immediately after play. Colt Anal Trainer Kit These can usually be found in most sex supply and novelty stores, or you can find it online. Colt makes great ass play products and plugs, and usually at a pretty affordable price. Playing and practicing with butt plugs will help you get used to the sensation of your anal spinchter muscle opening. The anal spinchter is what clenches tight when you have to go use the bathroom, and relaxes naturally when you sit on the toilet. Butt plugs are great at helping you learn to do that, and most guys gradually go up in size over time. You may find that the sensation of this muscle opening is intensely erotic – I did. TitanMen Butt Plug TitanMen not only makes great porn shoutout to performer Jesse Jackman , but their sex gear is well-made and reliable and can be found in most novelty stores. Their butt plugs are a great staple for ass play. Thug Double Fucker Blessed be the three men that first discovered double penetration – DP is one of the greatest gifts that gay men have been given. The Raw Pup Cock extenders, butt plugs, and jack-off tools are generally considered different kinds of sex toys, each capable of providing hours of fun. These three toys come together in one brilliant design – the Raw Pup. The Raw Pup is very similar to the Raw Dawg, which rocked the sex toy market a few years ago. I have been a personal fan of the Raw Dawg for years, and only recently learned that Fort Troff distributes the toy from Perfect Fit , one of the most reliable toymakers on the market. Like the Raw Dawg, the Raw Pup is a soft and squishy toy that you insert in the ass. Once inside the spinchter, it locks in the ass via a bulbed base like a butt plug. It is basically a tunnel plug see 38 that can more easily be used for sex, since most tunnel plugs do not work ideally for fucking. This one is great for the pup in your life. Six Ball Chain Gang This is one of many anal ball chains on the market and a good one to start off with, since the balls are relatively small. The Vixen six ball chain gang, available from Mr. TitanMen Inflatable Wonder This one has been in my toy box for years. As I mentioned earlier, there are dozens of different inflatable dildos and butt plugs, but this one from TitanMen is one that I can personally recommend , and is great for a beginner. Most of the ones you find at novelty stores are veiny, much too hard, or will not last long. If you want to buy a dildo, spend money on a good brand and buy one that is designed for ass play. Screwz Tit Suckers Similar in sensation to nipple clamps, nipple suction devices are basically penis pumps for your nips. Creating equal parts pain and pleasure, these are go-to items for nipple play enthusiasts. You do not have to do BDSM or any other kinky practice to enjoy getting gagged with duct tape – it will enhance vanilla sex and bring your orgasms to a new level. Duct tape can be found at your nearest Home Depot. Vet Wrap Duct tape is visually very sexy, but it will irritate the skin, leave a glue residue, and rip out hair when you pull it off. It is clingy, so it sticks to itself and pulls off easily. Vet wrap is also great if you want to cover more than just the mouth. I once had my entire head wrapped in vet wrap as part of a fun sensory deprivation scene. You could deplete the stores of vet wrap at your local CVS or buy bulk rolls on Amazon. Sounding Rods Sounding is a semi-extreme kink that involves inserting small thin rods usually metal into the urethra – the head of your dick. Since these are technically sex toys, they deserve a mention. I would recommend doing it slowly and with a partner, not solo. These flashy Oxballs sounding rods are designed to look like long, skinny gun barrels and are available at roughtradegear. The Pig-Hole Plug is a great fisting accoutrement, and will be loved by piss-play enthusiasts everywhere. This is basically a tunnel plug that matches the natural curvatures of the anal cavity and feels more comfortable to this writer than standard, round-tunnel plugs. Oxballs Goose Head Dildo This was actually one of my more recent purchases. I long believed that the only way to train your ass for fisting is to get fingered and slowly work your way up with a patient fister and lots of good lube Crisco. Then a friend in Los Angeles recommended this dildo. This makes your knuckles – the widest part of your hand – as curved and small as possible. Mimicking that basic shape, this dildo is a great practice tool for fistees. It attaches to the wall, so you can get some Crisco and some poppers and slowly back up onto it, or pop it on top of the toilet seat and try to sit. Go slowly and be careful. Anal hook Anal hooks are hooked metal poles with a metal ball at one end the end that gets inserted in the anus and a loop at the other. Once the ball is suctioned into the anal cavity, the curved metal rod will stick out, allowing the metal loop at the other end to be fastened to arm restraints, neck restraints, etc. Every movement of the metal rod and whatever it is attached to will be felt in the butt. This stainless steel ass hook from Mr. Parachute Ball Stretcher Parachute ball stretchers are for guys into CBT cock and ball torture and ball stretching, which is the kink practice of stretching the scrotal sac with weights and other devices to make the testicles hang lower. Check out this one from Fort Troff. Vibrating Metal Butt Bullets You have surely seen these in sex shops where they can be found for pretty cheap. You insert them in the ass one or both – most sets come with two and turn them on. The vibrating sensation alone can be enough to make your bottom orgasm. Try these twin silver butt bullets available on adamandeve. Speculum Commonly used in medical fetish scenes, speculums are metal devices that you insert in the anal cavity with lube! Try the Collins Speculum from Kink Industries. Metal Cock Ring Give one to your special guy. A metal cock ring is seen by many as a rite of passage signifying a crossover from novice, soft cock rings to genuine hard play – a somewhat absurd idea, since many guys just prefer rubber, leather, and silicone cock rings over metal ones. A metal cock ring automatically holds some risk that is not to be scoffed at. You want to make sure the cock ring is not too tight, and have ample amounts of silicone lube ready when removal time comes. Splorch Ovipositor Dildo I recently learned that an ovipositor is a tubular organ through which a female insect or fish deposits her eggs into a male host. There are big fetishes surrounding ovipositors along with aliens, tentacles, and host impregnation. This should not be that surprising, since the whole concept of the face-grabbers from the Alien movie franchise is inherently, darkly sexual. You insert the dildo, which has a hollow chute running through it, then push the eggs in. For obvious reasons, there is inherent risk in enjoying this item, as there is with inserting anything deep into the anus without a feed, and which you may not be able to get back out. But I think it is better that you know the Splorch exists. You both are in the world, you and the Splorch, and your life is better because of it.

Chapter 3 : The R&A - Clubs - Maximum of Fourteen Clubs

There are plenty of golf books which describe how to hold a club or cure a hook. There are probably thousands of books describing the careers of golfers who have made fortunes out of doing wonderful things with small white balls. But this book is about people who feel that they are doing well if the.

What more could a person need? Golfers tried their best to make due with what they had but some clubs were just too difficult to use. They would then go out and buy a brand new set with three woods 1, 3, 5, eight irons 3-PW and a putter. What a vicious cycle! Then came a bigger variety of wedges, advances in woods and new hybrid clubs. Golfers now had more more clubs to choose from. We get lots of confused golfers in our shop all the time. This club should have a fairly deep face! this makes it easier to hit it off the tee. It should also be the club with the least amount of loft. Look to titanium here! whether it is a driver, 3 wood or 5 wood. There is no law stating that all golfers must have a driver! check your ego and find something that works. Companies are starting to tap this market. Club 2 " The Putter This one is pretty obvious. Clubs 3,4,5,6 " The Long Clubs These clubs serve a few purposes! they are often used off the tee but many golfers try sometimes successfully to hit them from the fairway. Most golfers fill these slots with woods or hybrids. Do you hit your woods fairly well? Try 3, 5, and 7 woods. Have more success with irons? Try a 3 wood and then fill the gap with a few hybrids and maybe even a traditional cavity backed iron. The most important thing to remember here is to not have two clubs that do the same thing. If you choose a 4 hybrid, stay away from a 4 iron. Focus on lofts and lengths of the various clubs to fill your gaps properly. You really need to play to your strengths here! understand your options and find the clubs that work best. Most golfers use irons here! although there are a few other options. Some companies offer hybrid clubs in these lofts too. If you can control and iron better! go with and iron. Clubs 10,11 " The Short Clubs A traditional set would have an 8 iron and a 9 iron here and irons are probably the way to go too. Your main concern here should be finding clubs that hit the ball straight and high. Length is not a huge issue here. Some companies make hybrids and woods to fill these slots but most golfers should be able to hit an 8 and 9 iron without too much problem. A better player may want to look at a blade iron here! blades provide a bit more control and feel but less forgiveness. Clubs 12,13,14 " The Wedges People get so confused about wedges, lofts and distances so here is a brief outline. A traditional pitching wedge PW is about 48 degrees but they now range in lofts and can be as low as 45 degrees. A gap wedge, approach wedge, attack wedge! it has a million names GW, AW! is usually between 50 and 53 degrees. A sand wedge SW is usually between 54 and 57 degrees. A lob wedge is usually 60 degrees. There are other wedges available some people use a 64 degree wedge but these are the main ones. Do you want a club in between these two? Want something with a bit more loft for short chips and flops? Try to space these clubs so you can cover the most ground without leaving a huge gap in degrees. So there is a really rough layout of what a golf bag should look like. Do you hit long tee shots and need more help with short approach shots? Many golfers will have more than 14 clubs in their arsenal at home! this allows them to customize their bag before they head to the course. Maps are useful things! they can lead pirates to buried treasure and golfers to lower scores. Sit down, think about things that you do well and then go build a bag around your strengths. There is NO excuse for having a useless club in your bag!
