Do you ever run into any internet browser compatibility issues? A number of my blog visitors have complained about my site not working correctly in Explorer but looks great in Firefox. Do you have any solutions to help fix this problem? You have some really great articles and I think I would be a good asset. Please blast me an email if interested. I found it while browsing on Yahoo News. Do you have any suggestions on how to get listed in Yahoo News? This is my first visit to your blog! We are a group of volunteers and starting a new initiative in a community in the same niche. Your blog provided us useful information to work on. You have done a outstanding job! Please refer to the model-specific user manual for more detailed instrument and software featurerelated information. Separate booklets for nucleic acid and protein colorimetric methods are also available. For technical support, please contact: Using this technology, NanoDrop spectrophotometers have the capability to measure samples between 50 and times more concentrated than samples measured using a standard 1 cm cuvette. The Protein A method is applicable to purified proteins that contain Trp, Tyr residues or Cys-Cys disulphide bonds and exhibit absorbance at nm. This method does not require generation of a standard curve and is ready for protein sample quantitation at software startup. Colorimetric assays such as BCA, Pierce nm, Bradford, and Lowry require standard curves and are more commonly used for uncharacterized protein solutions and cell lysates. Do NOT use a squirt or spray bottle to apply water or any other liquid to the surface of the instrument. Wipe the sample from both the upper and lower pedestals with a clean, dry, lint-free lab wipe. Reconditioning Use the NanoDrop Pedestal Reconditioning Compound PR-1 as a rapid means of reconditioning the pedestals when the hydrophobic surface properties have been compromised and liquid columns break during measurement. O pen the vial containing PR-1 and use the applicator provided in the kit to remove a pin-head sized amount of the compound. Apply a very thin, even layer of PR-1 to the flat surface of the upper and lower pedestals. Wait 30 seconds for the PR-1 to dry. F old a clean, dry, lint-free lab wipe into quarters and remove the PR-1 by rubbing the surface of the upper and lower pedestals until no additional dark compound residue shows on the lab wipe. Cuvette Orientation NanoDrop c only Use etched arrow as light path guide when inserting quartz or masked plastic cuvette. Locate instrument away from air currents and exhaust fans. Surfactants and other components routinely used in protein buffers may reduce the surface tension properties of the liquid. Pipettor Selection Use calibrated pipettor with well-fitting tips. To avoid evaporation errors, it is essential to use an eight-channel pipettor to simultaneously load samples when using two or more pedestal positions on the NanoDrop Sample Aliquots Always use fresh tips and fresh aliquots for every measurement. Sample Homogeneity Highly concentrated protein samples require careful attention to ensure homogeneity before sampling. Non-reproducible results observed when making small volume measurements are a good indicator that the sample is not fully in solution or is not homogenous. It may be necessary to lightly vortex samples prior to sampling to ensure homogeneity. Sample Preparation Ensure sample isolation procedure is optimized and sample is purified prior to measurement. Any molecule with absorbance at nm will contribute to the total absorbance used to calculate sample concentrations. Triton X and NP-9 are two examples of components found in common buffers that may contribute to the total absorbance values at nm. Proteins in these types of buffers may not be suitable for direct quantitation using the A method. It is recommended that a colorimetric assay such as Pierce nm be used for proteins suspended in RIPA buffers. Refer to the reagent manufacturer for more information regarding buffer compatibility. Perform the Cleaning and Reconditioning procedures outlined in the Best Practices section on page 6. Open the A application. Load an aliquot of dH₂O onto the lower measurement pedestal and lower the sampling arm. After the measurement is complete, use a dry, lint-free lab wipe to remove the water from both the top and bottom measurement surfaces. Pipette an aliquot of the sample buffer onto the pedestal, lower the arm and click Measure. The result should be a spectrum that varies no more than 0. If not, consider using a colorimetric method to quantitate the protein samples. If the buffer is compatible with the A method, load a fresh aliquot of the buffer onto the lower measurement pedestal and lower the sampling arm. After the measurement is complete, use a dry, lint-free lab wipe to remove the buffer from both the top and bottom measurement surfaces. Although it is not necessary to blank between each sample, it is recommended that a new blank be taken every 30 minutes when measuring many samples. After the blank measurement is complete, enter the sample name in the Sample ID box, and choose the appropriate sample type as described below: Pipette an aliquot of the protein sample onto the lower measurement pedestal and lower the sampling arm. If measuring more than one sample at a time on the NanoDrop, it is important to use a multi-channel pipettor to deliver the sample aliquots. After the measurement is complete, use a dry, lint-free lab wipe to remove the sample from both the top and bottom measurement surfaces. Change pipette tips for the next measurement. If measuring multiple replicates of the same sample, it is important to use a fresh aliquot for every measurement to ensure accurate results. Review spectral image to assess sample quality. Refer to the Troubleshooting section on page 20 for more information. Please refer to www. Refer to the Published Extinction Coefficients section on page 13 for additional information regarding molar vs. The molar absorption coefficient of a peptide or protein is related to its tryptophan W, tyrosin Y and cysteine C amino acid composition. Absorptivity is wavelength specific for each protein and can be affected by buffer type, ionic strength and pH. When determining extinction coefficients for a specific protein, it is important to use the same buffer as will be used for the general assay. Protein sample concentrations are determined based on the absorbance at nm, the extinction coefficients determined by the selected sample type and a baseline correction. The default wavelength for the baseline normalization is nm. These values provide sufficient accuracy for most routine laboratory applications that require an assessment of protein concentration. Most sources report extinction coefficients for proteins measured at or near a wavelength of nm in phosphate or other physiologic buffer. The variation in reporting style underscores the importance of carefully reading stated values to be sure that the unit of measure is understood and applied correctly. Additional information is available in bulletin TR Assume you obtain an nm absorbance reading of 5. The NanoDrop software automatically includes the factor of 10 when reporting protein concentrations. The information presented above is for explanation purposes only. A description of each sample type is given below: Protein concentrations are calculated using the mass extinction coefficient of 6. Protein concentrations are calculated using the mass extinction coefficient of Lysozyme Protein concentrations are calculated using the mass extinction coefficient of This option is useful when measuring a protein solution for which no absorptivity information is available. For example, for a protein with a molar extinction coefficient of ϵ , M-1cm-1, enter in the ϵ window for all model types. Use this option when the molar extinction coefficient M-1cm-1 and molecular weight are known. As the pathlength gets shorter, the ability to measure higher concentrations without saturating the internal detector increases. The graphic below illustrates how utilizing pathlengths less than the standard 10 mm cuvette pathlength enables higher concentrations of samples to be measured without making sample dilutions. Therefore, when pathlengths are verified at one wavelength, the verification is valid for the entire measured spectrum. The definition of system would include the instrument, protocols being used, techniques employed by the user and the solution utilized as the control. These standards are not appropriate to assess NanoDrop instrument performance. Ensure all controls are stored as recommend by the manufacturer. Do not use controls past the stated expiration date. Common Reagents 10mm Absorbance 15 10 Wavelength nm Typical Protein Spectrum at nm BSA in PBS Below are several examples of reagents commonly used with proteins with absorbance in the ϵ nm range: Absorbance -4 - Suggestion:

Troubleshooting 1. Absorbance 30 25 20 - Suggestions: Wavelength nm 75 - A jagged appearance at the top of the mm peak most likely indicates detector saturation due to a highly concentrated sample. Absorbance 60 45 30 - Suggestion: Dilute the sample and remeasure. Multiple measurements of the same aliquot may result in evaporation and increased sample concentration values. If not, refer to the Instrument Related Issues section for guidance. Refer to the table of model specific detection limits on page 17 for guidance. If the instrument is out of calibration, contact Technical Support.
