He reads the document again and again, trying to polish the details into his mind. The words are in his head, and he knows exactly what he means but when he tries to communicate with others often the words he once knew get lost somewhere in his memory and the chronological order of sentences get muddled up. In , dad was working for one of the top legal firms in Australia. After receiving Dux of his high school and obtaining the highest possible tertiary entry score he completed his bachelor of Laws at the University of Queensland. Now he takes his pills morning and night, and reads throughout the day to remind himself of everything he has forgotten. She has dedicated her life to looking after him, a love that cannot be broken by the most treacherous of storms. Mum and Dad have history. Real history like no other that has shaped their lives into the courtship I see as my parents. Gail Renner sat in her English class with her best friend Pam next to her. Pam was infatuated with tight-pant, tight t-shirt wearing James Ryan. She picked up a pencil and carefully carved the letters of his name into the side of the wooden school desk as Gail sat stiffly, rolling her eyes. Fast forward to when Gail began work in a legal office, where coincidentally James worked on the floor above her. They bumped into each other every now and again and were both thankful for a familiar face. And so it went like every whirlwind romance “ They realized they liked each other, dated, and eventually fell in inescapable love. James was detached and was more focused on his sporting career than on his newly married life. So it went in February of , divorce papers were filed and the marriage was over almost as quickly as it had began. She went on her own, with no expectations and yet had the time of her life. She returned to a big family welcome home, she says she still remembers every little detail of the day. The letter confused Gail. The address on the front was scrawled, as if a five year old had written it. She opened it up and the same writing was almost illegibly written throughout the two-page long letter. I am writing to tell you I had an accident and have been at Southport Hospital for the past few months. I hit my head on pavement and fractured my skull, and because of my brain swelling it has caused some permanent scarring on my brain. They were still such close friends even if they were indeed, divorced. So Gail went straight to the hospital where James was still in a rehabilitation ward. James explained to her that he had to learn how to read and write again, he was having speech therapy to learn how to speak properly again. It was as if the last 10 years of schooling meant nothing and he was starting from scratch again. He struggled to put his words together, to properly communicate with Gail. But she understood and she sat on his bed for the rest of the day into the night hearing everything he had to say. The doctors in the hospital had been with him for months, had seen the hardest part of his recovery that Gail had not witnessed. Mum stayed with him everyday, every moment, and every baby step back to a normal way of life before spontaneously getting married again. Mum and dad rushed into the Brisbane Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages “ Mum with a handful of picked flowers and a sundress on. Well, here he sits 30 years on in his office, a wall full of certificates and hundreds of clients showing their absolute trust and respect for him. The only sign of the accident that remains are the scars on his brain.
