*Unnatural Instinct (Jessica Coran Novels) [Robert W. Walker] on calendrierdelascience.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers. For years, FBI medical examiner Dr. Jessica Coran's greatest adversary has been Judge Maureen DeCampe.*

Robert has also taught writing courses in the different permutations, whether it be developmental, composition, creative writing both introductory and advanced, studying the literary masters. He was born in Corinth, Mississippi on January 1, 1950, and grew up in Chicago, Illinois; one thing he saw from an early age, was crime. When he was just twelve or thirteen, he started writing so that he could gain a control over the chaos that comes with life. Some of his writing influences include: His work is from the thriller and horror genres. He has published under such pen names as: Walker is pretty prolific as an author, and in and out, he put out a total of seven books. Jessica Coran was a smart and determined medical examiner for the FBI, she was an expert of the criminal mind. Jessica believed that she could face anything. That was before she saw one of his victims in Wisconsin. Newspapers begin calling the Vampire Killer. Readers felt that Jessica was a strong character that they wanted to spend a lot of time with. Fans of the novel found this to have many characters that draw the reader in, upset them, and confuse them at all times. They make this a compelling read that makes the whole thing hard to step away from. Some are big fans of the whole series, and are glad that they picked them up, feeling that this one kicks the series off quite nicely. Jessica Coran has trapped and hunted some of the most infamous serial killers all over the country. The killer she chases is far more clever than anyone knows. He knows that someone is studying him from afar. He is going to painstaking lengths to plan the special fate he has in store for his next intended victim. Another from this series that is hard to put down. For some, this one may be a little better than the first because of the way it ramps up the tension, and there are even more gruesome details. Jessica Coran is on vacation in Hawaii and is ordered to help out in an urgent investigation of a serial killer, killing in Hawaii. He is called the Trade Winds Killer; he kills beautiful and young Hawaiian women. He uses a long and razor sharp blade that is commonly used to cut sugar cane. He operates precise, slow, ritualistic, it is almost religious. Jessica has learned about serial killers, even been close enough to one to feel their breath on one of her ears. It will take her places she never thought even existed. Just her own FBI badge is not going to protect her where this case is going to take her. Walker is at the top of the best thriller writers, for some readers, with the way he is able to spin a yarn. He keeps readers on the edge of your seat, and wondering what is going to happen next. Fans of the novel felt that the book pulled them in, right from the start, and they had a hard time stepping away from it for very long. Some only wish that they had found this stellar series much sooner, so they could have enjoyed it that much more. There is a new horror killing in New Orleans. This killer is both savage and unstoppable. Jessica is being hunted by something else. No one can find him, but they do know that he is coming after Jessica, as she is the one that caught him the last time. Jessica now faces trouble from two different killers. Jack Reacher is back! Family secrets come back to haunt Reacher when he decides to visit the town his father was born in. Because when he visits there he finds out no-one with the last name of Reacher has ever lived there. It leaves him wondering - did his father ever live there?
