Added this low numbered Collectible Vehicle plate image which was provided by Michael Wiener. As stated in the earlier post, the far left plate may have been used as the front plate while the rear plate has the 1 serial number in the center. Jordan Irazabal sends this current Passenger Vanity plate on the www base. While these three plate do not currently have a historical significance, they are the last three variations of school bus plates were originally introduced back in Version 8 SB prefix on yellow on blue base still needs to be added to the page. Updated this Version 14 Motor Vehicle Business plate. This was the last of this series of plates, and is one of a few M. Business plates without an embossed date. Business plates continued to be revalidated until the plate changeover in or These plates were made in 4- and 5-digit formats. No alpha characters were used. And yet another format variation on School Vehicle plates. This is the 6th or 7th variation on this plate type since the start of the www plates. Click the link above to see a description of all variants. Still need an image of a plate in the SV to SV range. While the plate is not current based on the stickers, the plate format is still in use. Today these plates are increasingly rare. A new section has been added, called Historic Plate Documents. If anyone has anything along this line PA only that you would be willing to share, I am looking for other similar material to include. The far left plate may have been used as the front plate while the rear plate has the 1 serial number in the center. First image of the new Penn State University plate. This image came courtesy of Clayton Moore. This plate was purchase very shortly after the plate introduction and already the number is at Also added this Veteran plate. Spotted this not-so-official Farm Use plate on the road today. Some farm trucks use made up plates to indicate that the vehicle actually has a Farm Vehicle Exemption. Since the official sticker is small and placed in an inconspicuous place, many farm trucks use some type of plate to indicate that they have a farm exemption. Without any plate they invite curious police officers to question the apparent lack of some type of credential. Added what I believe is a 77 base School Bus with a July 82 sticker. It appears that the 77 blue on yellow base was the start of SB series. There was no 71 School Bus base. At the time the 68 base was used until the 72 base came out. Added a pair of sample images of Permanent Trailer plates to the Plate History page. Over the years PA produced samples of almost every type of plate. Click the link for additional information and more images. The image was provided by Jordan Irazabal. The plates are not new to this website, but the owner, Eric Conner, provided nicer images. Two more School Bus plates have been added to the Plate History page. At first glance the plates may not look all that different, but the older plate still retains the vestiges of the state map outline, while on the other plate the map has been replaced with an embossed border. The Lima Fire Company has been added to the growing list of fire agencies with specialty plates. LF seems to be a popular suffix. The use of the 2 in the numerical prefix position can be explained. See the Plate Coding page for more. This Bus is wearing a plate that should have been replaced back in My best guess on the continued use of the old base is that when PA did re-plate, it was on a number-for-number basis. So the new plates had the same number as the old plates. Those numbers at the time were within the range of BA and BA The replacements while sporting the same number, were minus the dash separator, BA and BA Beginning at BA the dashes were again reinstated. These images were provided by Bruce Bufalini. So how do some get plates with special low numbers? I asked a member of our PA Legislature Dick Stevenson who was seen getting his picture taken with one of these low numbered plates. He did not answer me. I have asked PennDOT a similar question and I was provided with a bunch of stonewalling and doubletalk, but no answer. So much for transparency in government, so much for right to know. Updated my very poor image of a National MS Society plate with this one. I got the image from a reference website where the image was attributed to Tiger Joe Sallmen. This seems to be part of a pair of plates for that year. This plate was likely the front plate while the rear plate has the 1 serial number in the center. Click the text link above to see both plates. Spotted this nice PA Choose Life plate. Here are images of two different greyhound organizational plates. The plate on the far left is Going Home Greyhounds , and the other is National Greyhound Adoption

Program , which is also the current high. This is version 3 of the series. These were issued in 4-digit and 5-digit formats. Added this Inauguration plate from Eric Conner on far left, and updated this Inaugural , also fro Eric. These plate images are from Eric Conner. Continuing with the run of M. Business plates beginning in , and brings the total to 14 versions or variations of this plate type. The image on the far left may have come from an auction website, so the current plate ownership is unknown, however, comparing it to the center left image of another plate from Eric Conner shows that the colors on the raised loaf section are reversed. Could this have been the front plate while the others were used on the rear? School Bus has been started as new category on the Plate History page, thanks to some images from Clayton Moore. Here are the first two years of this plate type with more to come. Added these images of and M. So far there are nine different years of this plate type posted on the Plate History page, plus one year with two variations. More of this series to come. This image is also from Chuck. Although this photo may not show it, this plate is unique. Instead of the glass beaded reflectorized yellow paint used on standard issue and state made booster plates at that time period, this plate has gold leaf paint on the embossed areas. An impressive plate when seen in person. Casey served from January to January Chuck Harrington provided this image of a Foreign Consul plate on a 65 base with a 69 sticker. Click the link to read more about these plates. The plate helped establish that plates in that range are a continuation of what I refer to as Format 2. I am trying to establish at what point plates switched to Format 3. One of the goals of this website is to identify variations within plate types, and determine at which serial number each change takes place. If anyone has a disabled plate in their collection between DV and DV, please contact me. Eric Conner, who has provided the images, suggests that the far left image was the front plate, while the rear plate had the validation sticker.

Chapter 2 : VanityPL8S - Custom Vanity License Plate T-Shirts!

drew's vanity license plate collection MY PRIORITY PLATES ARE "PL8S" or "DREW" and related vanities (no numbers, except for the "8" in PL8S.) (I know BORT isn't really a word, but I'm a Simpsons fan, and if you've seen the show, you'll catch the reference!).

Photo Illustration by Slate. Use the arrows to view them. Not all states were forthcoming. Wyoming sounded downright embarrassed. Like many states, Utah reserves the right not to issue plates that its Division of Motor Vehicles deems inappropriate, either because the plate is obscene, offensive, or otherwise untoward. But most of the rules are a bit vaguer, leaving it to state officials to know an offensive plate when they see one. But some drivers have fought back. In a citizen in North Dakota who had previously held the plate HONKY made an official appeal to the North Dakota Department of Transportation after being denied the plate when trying to reregister it. The appeal was successful on the grounds that it was in reference to honky-tonk music. A man in New Mexico argued, through his attorney, that his rejected plate IB6UB9 was not sexual innuendo but an inside joke, about gambling. Anaya was at a casino with an acquaintance playing roulette, and during the course of the roulette game the comment was made by Mr. Does the message contain FU? The sample of plates denied by Utah for nonadministrative reasons—that is, not because they were too long, or already taken—was released in , and it has some unknown qualities to it. Citing a computer system upgrade since the list was generated, a representative from the state told me it was not possible to determine the dates the document covers. But several of the categories would seem to overlap. The state does not specify the differences between the Vulgar, Profane, Obscene, and Sex Reference categories, for example, and plates seem to be sorted into them in arbitrary fashion: Though not ideal for analysis, the categories do provide a general sense of the kinds of mischief Utah drivers have tried and failed to get into: Of course, these statistics only tell us how many plates of each type were actually caught; there is no way of knowing how many uncouth plates in each category were submitted. Only with complete license plate records which are not public information could we know how many plates with drug references slipped by the workers in the Utah state government.
