So, for me, the question to look at is, why? The magnificence of her architecture is a primary and consistent catalyst, and so I decided to investigate. Using the same format of the first volume in the series, Dream of Venice, the book features a collection of essays, each accompanied by a photograph, meant to explore the elements that make Venice unique in the world. The essays are written by contemporary architects and architectural writers, who, by sharing their personal experiences of the city, take readers on an intimate journey into the Venetian urban landscape, a journey that is enhanced by the vivid photographs matching the texts. This is why I felt the need to shoot in the coldest and most inhospitable months, which also happen to be those closest to my idea of Venice. What has stuck with me most of my years living in Venice as a student are the cold, the humidity, the fog, the acqua alta I woke up to on certain mornings, the steps resounding in the deserted calli. Dream of Venice Architecture hopes to bring attention to the risks the city is facing. If Venice loses relevance, the city will no longer be living, and will become an embalmed parody of her former glory. There will be no one left who cares enough to save her. Venice is not an amusement park; it is, as Locktov says, a living city. And that lone figure that seems to proceed with determination toward the water! An improbable direction which I was lucky enough to catch. I like the photo because it is almost an abstract composition. Yet, on closer inspection, it is, unequivocally, Venice. A portion of the proceeds from each book will be donated to Fondazione Querini Stampalia to support their architecture programming in Venice. The ratio of contributors will be inverted, 45 photographers and one opening essay. Stay tuned by following Dream of Venice on Facebook and Twitter. Photographer and documentary filmmaker Riccardo De Cal was born and lives in Asolo, one hour and 15 minutes from Venice. Check his work on his website. Products by Bella Figura Publications.

How do we see it? How do we capture it? What does it look like? In this, our third book in the Dream of Venice series, we will be exploring Venice as a narrative in chiaroscuro. In a city noted for her luminous palette, there is elegant realism in focusing only on shadow and light. Without the distraction of color, her reality will be exposed. Established in as the first awards program open exclusively to independents, the Independent Publisher Awards receive 5, international entries. A cadre of architects and architectural writers explore the uncharacteristic elements that make Venice unique in the world. Often the first reaction to Venice is one of feeling overwhelmed by the astonishing beauty of her existence. The book includes reveries from architects who have built in the city, been inspired by the city and share in the wonder. The introduction is by Richard Goy , the international authority on Venetian architecture. He bridges the chasm between the original muddy wilderness of the 5th century and the opulence of the built environment. The dramatic photographs are by the award-winning documentary filmmaker and photographer Riccardo De Cal , who has focused his work on architects, architecture and restorations in the Veneto. A portion of the proceeds from each book will be donated to Fondazione Querini Stampalia. Dream of Venice Architecture is a luminous book, which portrays Venice as a magnificent living city. The luminous photographs, in both color and black and white, compliment the intimate thoughts, memories, poems, and stories of notable contributors from the worlds of art, literature, design, cuisine, music, and filmmaking. Readers will want to listen to the silence of the canals and get lost in the ethereal mist of Piazza San Marco. His architectural, travel and cityscape photographs have been included in exhibits up and down the West Coast. He was born in New York City. JoAnn Locktov established Bella Figura Publications in , as an imprint dedicated to publishing books on contemporary Venice. Her work as an international publicist in design and architecture has brought her to Italy annually for last decade. Frances Mayes is a preeminent poet, memoirist, essayist, and novelist. You must sit and people watch at one of these cafes in the square. The allure of Venice seduces visitors and I admit it, me, with its old-world charm, scenic vistas, spectacular architecture and a culture unlike any place I have seen! Once a mighty empire that controlled major trading routes between Europe and the East, Venice prevails today as a major tourist destination, on which it relies heavily for its sustenance. Standing testament to the power and wealth once enjoyed by Venice, are magnificent basilicas, palaces and squares or campi decorated with some of the finest paintings, frescos and sculptures in the world. From Byzantine and Gothic to Renaissance and Baroque, these awe-inspiring edifices remain standing after years and are uniquely Venetian! Around every corner, canal or calle, a picturesque postcard is waiting to take your breath away. Piazza de San Marco Campanile - you must take the elevator or walk to the top for spectacular views of Venice. From that moment on, we were under the bewitching spell cast by Venice herself, unavoidable in under all circumstances. Spectacular and ornately decorated cas or houses such as the Casa Biondetti line the Grand Canal end to end. Close up of the fresco that adorns Casa Biondetti on the Grand Canal. San Giorgio Maggiore Church. Basilica de San Marco and Palazzo Ducale. The campanile is just to the left of this viewpoint. Inside, an elaborately decorated nave that soars to dizzying heights and a baldacchino similar to that of St. If there is one piece of advice I can impart to anyone who visits Venice, it is to get lost within its labyrinth of streets and alleyways. El Teatro de Fenice or the Fenice Theatre restored to its former glory before a devastating fire burned the centuries-old theatre almost entirely to the ground. Loved every word of it! I strongly recommend you plan for an afternoon excursion to Murano - the historic island just east of Venice where Venetian Glass has been crafted by artisans for more than 1, years. Just hop onto a vaporetto or if you have a few extra Euro, let me suggest a water taxi for a thrilling ride across the lagoon. Another island in the lagoon - Burano - should be included on your itinerary as well. Welcome to Murano, the island of Venetian Glass. Although somewhat expensive, a cruise through the ancient canals of Venice aboard a legendary gondola makes for a perfect afternoon and an even more enchanted evening tour. We experience art, culture, wartime, scandals and end at its present-day status as a tourist destination.

Sep 28, Paulina rated it it was amazing It was a real good book. I think people should read this book. This review is from: When The Animals Went To Play An illustrated bedtime story for children ages Baby - 8 years Dixie Tails Kindle Edition The author gives us background information that at age twelve she had a horse named Dixie with whom she often shared her fantasy tales. That is the origin of Dixie Tales. She finds them one by one acting very strangely by trying to be human! The turtle is reading a comic book, the cow is looking in the mirror, the horse taking a bath and the dog making pizza. By the end of the tale she is wondering, what will they be doing outside on a summer day? Our little friend invites the reader to draw what they think will happen and send it to her website. The rhymes are one or two lines and very simple. This book is recommended for ages birth through eight, but I believe it better suited for the lower end of that range. Vivid illustrations complement the silly rhymes. A child will enjoy hearing them over and over. Comment Comment Permalink When Monsters Come Out to Play. When Monsters Come Out to Play. It is written in rhymes which flow nicely most of the time. The drawings are simple but colorful. An assortment of monster types visit. One or two of them are depicted a bit on the scary side. Be aware of this if your child is easily frightened. The message of the book to the child is a valuable one. A delightful read aloud for children age three and up! Comment Comment Permalink

Chapter 5 : - Venice A Journey of Dreams by Alvisè.; H. Simeone Huber; Luciana Simionato Zorzi

"The Dream of Venice series is an exploration into understanding Venice as a contemporary city," says JoAnn Locktov, the publisher and editor behind the essay and photography book collection dedicated to La Serenissima.

A year in the planning.. We stayed in Vienna for 2 nights on a surprise trip for my husbands 60th birthday I was so excited! Especially knowing that we were returning via the Orient Express From that precious moment when I stepped up on board and Matthew, our wonderful steward said the magic words.. That moment will stay with me forever! The suite was superb. We spent a lot of time exploring all the secret nooks and crannies that have been so painstakingly designed to perfection. The quality of the fittings and workmanship both in the suite and the rest of the train was breathtaking. Prepare to spend a lot of time eating, and doing so extremely well! The kitchen staff are truly magicians! The waiters are all fabulous, knowledgeable, charming and so good at their jobs. We had a drink in the afternoon after lunch, decided on the late sitting, had a drink in our cabin before dinner, and went to the bar afterwards. Room to sit, but busy enough for a fabulous atmosphere, with dancing, singing to both the train pianist, and a great jazz duo complete with drum, kazoo and washboard! Everyone on board dressed up for dinner. We found the coach transfer painless and typical of channel tunnel crossings, and we loved the British Pullman. In conclusion, we loved our trip. Expensive, yes, but was it worth it? Very special thanks to Matthew, our steward, for his care, charm and attention to detail. Also, train manager Paulo, who made sure that we experienced the very best time and missed nothing, and made us laugh so!

Setting[ edit ] Every night, all human dreams are played out in Nightopia and Nightmare, the two parts of the dream world. The evil ruler of Nightmare, Wizeman the Wicked, is stealing this dream energy from sleeping visitors to gather power and take control of Nightopia and eventually the real world. To achieve this, he creates "Nightmaren"â€” jester -like beings who can flyâ€”including Jackle, Clawz, Gulpo, Gillwing and Puffy, and many minor maren. He also creates two "Level One" Nightmaren: Synopsis[ edit ] William Taylor and Helen Cartwright are two children who live in the city of Bellbridge a fictionalised version of London [5] [6]. Will is an aspiring football player, Helen a prodigy violinist. Both children suffer nightmares and come under attack by the Nightmaren, who chase them into the world of Nightopia. The story reaches its climax as a stairway appears at the Dream Gate and Helen and Nights ascend, only to be trapped by Wizeman and pulled into darkness. Will arrives too late and dives in after them, arriving in the night skies above Bellbridge, where he finds that he has the ability to fly without Nights or their Ideya. After defeating Realta, the trio prepare to face Wizeman. Both Will and Helen defeat Wizeman, who is subsequently destroyed. Since Wizeman kept all of his creations alive, Nights vanishes in a white light, bowing as if it were the end of a performance, and the children wake up crying. That evening, Helen plays her violin for her mother in a crowded hall, while Will celebrates with his father after winning a football game. He then loses the ball and goes after it, only to come upon Helen playing her violin. The lights suffer a temporary blackout, and when they turn back on, Helen sees Will extending a friendly hand to her. Recognising each other from their adventures in Nightopia, the two reach for each other as it begins to snow. The main gameplay objective is to fly through rings and free bird-like Nightmaren, which will provide the keys required to unlock the next level. Journey of Dreams is split into seven levels. The levels are distributed equally between the two children characters: There are three cages in each level, and all must be unlocked within a set time before the player can proceed. If it is fully depleted, the player will no longer be able to use boosts. There are three personas: Game design was primarily prepared by Iizuka and took around six months to reach the development process. Iizuka felt that it was the appropriate time to release a Nights gameâ€”he felt that the industry was dominated by violence and was keen to release a more family-friendly title. The team designed the Nights franchise to have a distinctly British style, in contrast to Sonic the Hedgehog , which was designed to be more American. Despite the limitations, both Sasaki and Hataya were able to produce a better quality soundtrack by using a wider range of instruments than what was used in the previous game. In addition, Sasaki asked an employee from Delfi Sound Inc. The main tools and software used during development were Digital Performer and Pro Tools , which, according to Hataya, were the standard tools used in music production. Sasaki also ensured that each theme included the exhilaration of "flying in the air", as it was a core element of gameplay. Since the team were aware that Journey of Dreams had a greater sense of adventure than the original, the team knew that they could incorporate a larger variety of music into it so that players would enjoy a wider range of emotions. Original Soundtrack was released on 26 January exclusively in Japan and contains three separate CDs with all of the music featured on the Wii version. An unofficial two-CD tribute album, Nights:

Chapter 7 : StackCommerce | About

"Dream of Venice Architecture" is a journey through the Venetian urban landscape, in search of those features that make it a city unique in the world. yтали discussed this with JoAnn Locktov, principal of Bella Figura Publications, publisher of the volume.

At this moment, it is not clear whether it is a reality or a dream. That kind of feeling, as if time and space travel. This light, slender, stylish boat cracked the question of traffic in Venice as a child. To feel the unique customs of Venice, in the city of Venice in Gondola cruise ship has become every visitor to come here must experience the project. But the price is not really cheap, 30 minutes of Gondola route 80 euros, 45 minutes about euros, each boat can take people. Along the narrow and wide canal of Venice, you can also see the ancient houses which were built centuries ago. These houses still maintain the look and style of the time, bright flowers from the balcony out, but also to the city more infinite vitality. As the ship moved forward, the waves swung and scattered the picturesque reflections. Gondola indulged in the embrace of Venice, listen to the boatman singing Italian folk songs, as if forget the existence of time, with the ripples of the blue waves, completely melt in this unique charm. Like Venice, because he is very romantic, dare not like Venice too much, because too romantic. The romance of Venice is more or less a mixture of dismal beauty. With too much groundwater pumping, causing the land of Venice to sink, coupled with periodic tides, Venice, which is beautiful because of the water, is slowly being eroded by floods. How long will this city, which was listed as a World Heritage site in , be beautiful? All we can do is get close to him, appreciate him, and fill our hearts with romance. In Venice Island is like a natural shopping center, a variety of local characteristics of the small range of shops, without too much effort to find the most characteristic souvenirs. Walking slowly between the paths paved with stones, the house, with its contrasting colors, skipped slowly before its eyes, as if it were a piece of fine art. Here, it seems that every inhabitant on the island has a unique idea within them. Walk, the sun will set west, the color island in the sunlight under the color more jump up. Find a place to sit on the ground, on one side is a colorful paradise, the other side is a colorful sea dressed by the sun, this kind of beauty like a dream, the moment to bring people to childhood, the time when the palette was overturned. Next life, I want to live backwards. The first step is to die and leave it behind. Get a pension and start working. I got a gold watch on the first day, and a celebration party. Forty years later, young enough to enjoy retirement. And ready to go to high school. Then he turned into a child, carefree to play with no responsibility on his shoulders. Soon, he became a baby until he was born. For the last nine months of my life, I was floating in a sumptuous spa. The place to live was getting bigger and bigger, and then, ha, I ended my life in an orgasm. My WeChat Public number xiaoyangyaka.
