Lincoln County War Born Susan Hummer in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania from a German Baptist Dunkard background, she left home at an early age after her mother had died and her father remarried. In , the couple moved to Lincoln, New Mexico , where her husband had accepted a job with the company of Lawrence Murphy. Working alongside James Dolan , McSween soon lost his desire to work for the company, and had by that time become friends with John Tunstall , a wealthy English rancher. Through Tunstall, the couple met John Chisum , and by the three men had established a rival business to the Murphy-Dolan businesses who had completely monopolized every business transaction in Lincoln. Problems between the two factions began there, and on February 18, , outlaw Jesse Evans and members of his gang working with "the boys" from the rival faction of James Dolan also known as The Santa Fe Ring, shot and killed Tunstall, which sparked the Lincoln County War. Her husband was killed at the end of that battle, despite his being unarmed and attempting to surrender. Colonel Nathan Dudley was one of her main targets, and he did stand trial , but was acquitted. Jesse Evans killed Chapman, then fled the territory, after which eventually the whole matter simply went away. In she married George Barber a young law clerk and later attorney who aided in her recovery. Later the couple divorced. By some estimates she owned upward of 8, [2] By the mids her ranch holdings were some of the largest in the territory. She became extremely wealthy through cattle sales and mining a small silver vein on the property. On April 21, , the Old Abe Eagle of Lincoln reported that she had driven to cattle from her ranch to Engle, the most accessible railroad point, from which place they were shipped "in 38 foot New England Cars" to the Jones and Nolan feed lots in Grand Summit and Strong City, Kansas. The New York Commercial Advertiser said: The house was built with her own hands. The huge ranch on which it is located with its 8, cattle, is managed entirely by her. It is she who buys or takes up the land, selects and controls the men, buys, sells and transfers the cattle. She is also a skillful and intelligent prospector, and found the valuable silver mine on her territory in which she now holds a half interest. Over time she went through the money she had accrued making frequent trips to El Paso to divest herself of the lavish jewelry she had acquired in order to support herself. She died from pneumonia, an impoverished woman in White Oaks, on January 3, , aged 85, and is buried there in the Cedarvale Cemetery. She was supported in later life by her nephew Edgar Shields. He sent her monthly checks and paid her funeral expenses. In the Shadow of Billy the Kid: Chamberlain, a professor of history at Eastern Michigan University. Violence in Lincoln County , William A.
