

Chapter 1 : Action Front!: October

List of dates where Wednesday falls on the 5th of the month - or any other combination.

Bring it to the boil and let it simmer for three hours with the lid on the pot and checking it to make sure it is always covered in water. Be warned - if it is not covered with water it will explode. Crush the biscuits finely. I used the kitchen whizz but you could pop them in a sealed zip bag and crush with a rolling pin or put them in a deep bowl and use a glass base to crush them. My mum used to do it this way using a small cream bottle back in the days when milk and cream came in glass bottles. Add the coffee and mix. Melt the butter and mix into the biscuits and then press into a lined tin. Cool in the fridge. I used a spring base tin so that I could remove the pie easily. I lined the sides with baking paper so it was folded out to the outside of the tin. I had the spring catch open then closed it once the base was in place. The pics on the right show the tin upside down and then looking in from the top so you can see how the paper comes out the bottom. This means when you are removing the pie from the tin to serve there is as little mess as possible. I greased the base then pressed the mixture in letting it come up at the sides slightly. Warm the opened can slightly to spread if it is too thick. This can all be done sometime before the meal. Peel and slice the bananas. I cut them in half then sliced them lengthways in to thirds and placed them close together over the caramel. Beat the cream until soft peaks are formed but not too stiff. Grate chocolate over the top. Remove the spring tin and paper and slide off onto a plate to serve. Now the reason why I have typed in capitals in the making of the caramel is because I had a nasty burn. I opened the can of condensed milk after I had boiled it, too soon after taking it from the pot. Now I was concerned it might explode so I made sure the tear tab on this can was facing away from me. I used a towel to hold it as I carefully used the handle of a spoon to lever the lid open. Just as the first bit opened up shoot a spout of caramel like a fountain. And plop it landed on my hand and my head and shoulder. Silly me quickly wiped the caramel off my knuckle only to take the skin with it. I held it under the tap for a while but the removing of the skin had done the damage. Needless to say it is going to take a while to heal and will probably scar. However later that evening I looked up and discovered where the rest of it was!! Just shows you the force it came out at. The ceiling above the sink!!

Chapter 2 : Tonic for the Dystonic: October

Watch Democracy Now! - Season , Episode - Wednesday, October 5, In Somalia, at least 70 people were killed yesterday in the capital of Mogadishu after a large truck bomb exploded.

I am just about half way there! I felt the baby move a few weeks ago, but wasn't sure that's what it was until it started happening more often. I never used to get them before I was pregnant. I could nap all day. Either would have been ok, but now I have my partner in crime. I found it's one of the only things that helps me relax! I do take 4 folic acid a day though, and try to take a prenatal whenever I can. I get so excited every time I drive by it! I hope it stays that way. It kills my back and tailbone. Kevin likes it ok, but not his favorite. I like other names better but I feel like Zoe should be her name. So it might change, I am sure it will, but for now, I call her Zoe. Her brain is designating specialized areas for smell, taste, hearing, vision, and touch. Her arms and legs are in the right proportions to each other and the rest of her body now. Her kidneys continue to make urine and the hair on her scalp is sprouting. A waxy protective coating called the vernix caseosa is forming on her skin to prevent it from pickling in the amniotic fluid. Every baby develops a little differently – even in the womb. As a result, you may notice some achiness in your lower abdomen or even an occasional brief, stabbing pain on one or both sides – especially when you shift position or at the end of an active day. The ligaments that support your uterus are stretching to accommodate its increasing weight. You may be noticing some skin changes, too. Are the palms of your hands red? You may also have patches of darkened skin caused by a temporary increase in pigment. That darkened line running from your belly button to your pubic bone is called the linea nigra, or "dark line. In the meantime, protect yourself from the sun, which intensifies the pigment changes. Excited to be 19 weeks.

Chapter 3 : PBS NewsHour - Season , Episode Wednesday, October 5, - calendrierdelascience.com

Wednesday, October 5, Way Back Wednesday: Forks are for Fricassées Clockwise from top: Fricassée close-up, Fricassée served with a green salad and chardonnay, vegetables cooking, parsley from my garden.

Russian ambassador Vitaly Churkin defended his veto by pointing to the situation in Libya. The majority of members would have supported a sanctions resolution. And the countries in the region are everyday coalescing and raising their voices against what is transpiring in Syria—that the behavior of the regime is absolutely intolerable. Canada is banning the purchase, transportation or importing of petroleum products from Syria, and has frozen the assets of individuals and entities. Turkey has also promised sanctions, though the Prime Minister has not released details. The country also plans to close their shared border with Syria. Greek workers hold massive strike over austerity measures Thousands of striking workers in Greece are demonstrating today against austerity measures passed by the government in a last ditch effort to save the country from bankruptcy. As workers walked off the job, flights were grounded, trains halted, public schools shut and major museums closed. Police in riot gear sprayed tear gas on protesters outside Parliament today as they threw rocks and tried to storm government buildings. The government announced this week that it would miss its deficit REDUCTION target by nearly 2 billion euros, and that it will start running out of money to pay salaries and pensions by mid-November. Ansel Herz has more, from Port-au-Prince. The third nominee, Garry Conille, was seen as a less political choice. Conille has worked at the UN for many years and translated for Clinton during his recent visits to Haiti. Did the international community send him to do good work for Haiti? Did the international community send him because they will profit from him? He was suspended for three months, for involvement in political activities outside his job, without permission. Al-hini denies the charges. I have never been involved in any political works. My work has always been for the union, for serving others. Yet law enforcement officials announced Tuesday that a Bush-era gun probe operation also allowed hundreds of guns to fall into the hands of arms traffickers. Caroline Jackson reports from Tucson. During the program, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives agents in Tucson also allowed guns to be transferred to known arms traffickers. This according to testimony from two anonymous law enforcement officers. Germany Reopens Hundreds Of Nazi Probes Nazi war-crimes investigators in Germany are reopening hundreds of dormant investigations, and say the effort could lead to many new prosecutions. The conviction of former U. Demjanjuk denies being a guard at the Sobibor death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland, and is appealing the case. Due to the advanced age of both the suspects and survivors able to testify, investigators are not waiting until the Demjanjuk appeals process reaches a conclusion to move forward with other prosecutions. The Environmental Protection Agency says if the latest effort to lower air quality standards for mercury is approved the health of thousands of people will be negatively affected Matt Lazlo reports from Washington. Honduran leader meets with Obama as question over killings persist Today President Obama meets with Honduran leader, Porfirio Lobo in an oval office meeting at the White House. After Zelaya was removed from power, the country entered a new period of violence and instability. The arrests and killings of students, journalists, labor leaders and activists continue under Lobo. New York Muslims push to dismantle police spy unit In New York, activists and Muslim community members are trying to come up with a concrete set of actions to counter a police spying unit. In August the AP reported that the police department was using undercover officers to monitor ethnic communities and had investigated hundreds of mosques and infiltrated dozens more. On Monday, civil rights lawyers asked a Manhattan judge to compel the police department to reveal records about the secret program. Last night, at a town hall meeting, activists and community members discussed other options to shutter the controversial program.

Chapter 4 : Mumsey's Ramblings: October

Watch PBS NewsHour - Season , Episode - Wednesday, October 5, Tonight on the program, Democrats propose raising a tax on millionaires to help fund President Obama's jobs plan.

In September I started my healthy living goals. September was drink more water and no soda. October, not so much. My goal was to work on sleep. Namely getting to bed by 11pm every night that Mike is gone. No staying up til I would say that I started strong, but have really just had a tough time lately. It feels like wasting time when I could be getting things done. And with Mike gone, there really is very little "free" time. I feel like I am going, going, going non-stop! Found out that Mike will most likely get the job in Joplin. What does that mean for us? Well, no longer working in Canada and a little closer to home. But still 5 hours away. So pretty likely the same type of work schedule. Home on weekends, gone Sunday night through Friday night most weeks. I keep telling everyone I am fine. The kids are doing great. Well, except to my real friends. The ones who love me no matter what: This Joplin job is three years long. When it is completed, Erin will be seven years old and Evan will be That is a long time for him to have to be gone so much. But we are both grateful for weekends home and the occasional extra day or two to be around during the week: Plus computer cameras to talk every night and phone cameras so I can send him daily updates. Like when Erin had her surgery! And I know we will be ok. We really have a great support network. Friends and family who are there for us and really, truly care! And we belong to a great "village": So that always helps me in the end! A lesson I have learned about family and friendship - true friends and people who love you will accept you flaws and all. They understand that everyone is human. We are not perfect. And this is something I take into every single relationship I have and I think it makes my current friendships stronger because there are no expectations. Just friendship and support. As far as healthy goals, exercise is going well. In the past six weeks, I have only missed three days of exercise. And I know that will happen. But I think I am on the right track this time. The days I missed exercise, I felt completely sluggish and out of sorts. The days I do exercise, I feel my mood lifted and healthier. So it is a great incentive! Adding pilates and strength training to the mix has helped a lot as well! And then the other two days are a combo of pilates, weight training and yoga. Although I do try to get a little bit of yoga in every day. Yoga just really relaxes me: So now I am off to exercise because I know it will make me feel better! Posted by Mary Jo at.

Chapter 5 : Newscast for Wednesday, October 5, " FSRN

Content for Wednesday, October 5, Blog Entries. Bass Summit IV at Dizzy's. Get La Cura 1 comment. Toot a Hollow Horn 1 comment. Decision On Sale of Carlton Oaks Golf Course Delayed 2 comments.

They are so different than infantry and cavalry in the war that they deserve extra time. They need our love and they earned it with their actions. You could argue that they needed more skill, determination, grit and dedication than the other branches. Who else would go into combat with NO weapons other than their artillery tubes?! The crew members of each piece had no side arm or sword. The drivers of the limbers had pistols but theirs were mostly to shoot to death the wounded horses pulling their guns. The crew members of each gun even had to walk and run to keep up with the guns. Riding on the limber chests is mostly crap which is perpetuated by sculptors and people not in the know. What other branch of the service would the men put up with this nonsense, only the most dedicated or crazy? As the war progressed the myriad of types changed and older tubes fell out of favor. In the beginning both armies used whatever they had but over time smaller caliber guns and howitzers disappeared for the most part. Since the production of all guns was time consuming and expensive to produce the Southern forces found themselves behind the eight-ball and most importantly their production and quality control in the making of fuses REALLY hurt this service for the Confederates. Projectiles Whether we are talking about smoothbore pieces or rifled pieces the rounds they fired were essentially the same. Solid shot " This is what you might expect, they were solid rounds with no bursting charge and was not hollow. Any piece classified by a weight designation refers to its solid shot weight. So for example, the 12 pound Napoleon means that the solid shot for the Napoleon weighed 12 pounds. In counter battery roles the key here was to destroy the gun carriage, kill the horses pulling the limber and gun and disable the piece itself. Even if an opposing crew could place a shell to explode directly over an artillery crew it might be very hard to cause many casualties because of the fact that the crew was somewhat dispersed while performing their duties. This fact never dissuaded them from trying but firing solid shot was the preferred method. Strangely enough, at the battle of Gettysburg the entire amount of rounds expended by the Union army tells a very strange story regarding solid rounds. You read account after account of counter battery action and the officers write that they fired solid shot, knocking out and putting Confederate guns out of action. You read about the success the Union batteries had over their Southern counter parts yet very very few solid rounds were actually used. Well, if you read carefully you notice that they used a high percentage of their Case shot rounds. What I think happened is the gunners used the lighter weight case shot without punching the fuses to get the longer range instead of the shorter ranch of the heavy solid round. Obviously a lighter shell flew further and performed almost as good. More bang for your buck. Light Artillery had a Confederate solid shot strike the muzzle of one of his guns Napoleons , dented the opening, killed the man about to load the next round, cracked the axle and damaged the left wheel. Another crew member picked up the next round and tried to slide it into the barrel. The ball got stuck in the barrel, half sticking out and half stuck in. A quick thinking crew member ran back to the limber chest and grabbed an axe. He tried whacking the shell with the flat of the axe hoping to just give it that extra push the have it pass the blockage. After hitting it several times they decide it was hopeless and retired the piece from the field. In the next 4 hours the piece cooled and shrunk the muzzle of the barrel almost sealing the ball permanently stuck in the muzzle. After the battle the gun was sent to the State House of Rhode Island as a souvenir of the battle. It was there for over years, amazing visitors and thousands of people had their pictures taken with the gun over the years. That means that the powder charge was inside the barrel" about 2 pounds of black powder. There is still black powder down there and has been for the last years" aiming at visitors to the State House! Ever skip a rock along the surface or a lake or any body of water? It skips, skims and plows its way until momentum or a very solid object stops it. This is what the gunners did with solid shot fired at infantry and cavalry. Of course it is pointless to fire it perpendicular to a single line of troops because at most it might hit two men if you are lucky. The optimum situation is when you have a line of troops wheeling across your front. It was a nightmare for the attacking Confederates and a wet dream for Union artillery. It was payback for what the Reb gunners inflicted upon Union infantry at Antietam. The fuse was set in term of the amount of seconds when the fuse would explode. The Gunner would call out the amount of seconds he wanted the fuse to be set and this was done at the limber chest. Experience and the situation would tell him how long it should be set for. Confederate fuses were notorious for being unreliable. They might explode too soon, too late or not at all! They could just never predict what might happen. The difference between Case shot and Shell was what was inside or not! Shell was completely hollow and filled with just black powder. The idea was the shell would explode and send large chunks of the metal outer shell flying in all directions causing massive damage. Some soldiers at the time wrote home how a shell exploded right over their heads and surprisingly hurt no one! An equal amount of stories would tell of metal chunks tearing someone apart. At Gettysburg a Union brigade commander from the 2nd Corps, Col. Willard, had his face torn off by a chunk of shell. Case shot was much more predictable and deadly. As long as the fuse worked and the shot was on target it could cause horrible damage to the enemy. The round was hollow, had a powder charge but the shell was also filled with dozens of iron or lead round balls larger than a Minie Ball. Once the outer shell shattered the spray of metal was almost like a canister round fired from above, below or among. This eye witness account from Gettysburg tells the story better than I can ever explain. Robert Carter with the 22nd Massachusetts infantry, at the battle of Gettysburg, was with the skirmish line advancing to the Peach Orchard at the end of the battle. The scenes of that spot, as revealed its dreadful horrors to our astounded gaze, still linger on our memories. They were literally blown to atoms. Corpses strewn the ground at every step. Arms, heads, legs, and parts of dismembered bodies were scattered all about, and sticking among the rocks and against the trunks of trees, hair, brains, entrails, and shreds of human flesh still hung, a disgusting, sickening, heart-rending spectacle to our young minds. It was just a tin can filled with iron balls. Once fired the can would tear apart and fill the air with the deadly missiles. It was like a giant shot gun. Not much skill was needed, just load, point and shoot. Artillery crew fired it into the air around the yard mark to rain down on the heads of the enemy. Certainly firing it close up did the most damage. You could even fire two cans of canister but with only one powder charge. Seeing the Rebs rush at his guns he heard someone yell "Get the guns! He reported that amid the smoke and flames he saw knapsacks, rifles, canteens, heads, arms, legs and chunks of flesh fly into the air. After the smoke cleared there was no one standing.

Chapter 6 : Ef for Effort: October

Home: Shoppe: Tutorials: Recipes: Press.

Cruise Zak won us a free cruise to Ensanada Mexico, Zak won this by being in the top 5 for sales in Poultry Feed in his company- the whole United States! We boarded our ship in Long Beach, CA. It was overwhelming at first- the ship was HUGE!!! Their was alot to figure! On Friday we ate lunch on the boat, we walked around the boat-trying to figure out where things were, we had a meeting with all the Cargill people who also won this trip- the Utah State BYU football game was on, we watched that- I was not to happy about this- there was so much to do, and we ended up watching TV. We had the late dinner every night at 8: But on Friday night I was feeling a little sick- motion sickness- so we went right to bed and after that I was fine! On Saturday we got to Ensanada- so we went and walked around downtown, watched the funny seals. Then later we went on a tour to the Blow hole- there is only 3 in the world- it was pretty cool. Where the Blow Hole was their was the flea market- I felt like I was being attacked by purianas- Holy Cow- those mexicans wanted to make us a deal on everything! On Saturday night we went to the family friendly comic show- the guy was so funny we decided we would check out his adult comedy show to- he was very good and funny! We also went to the main show- dancing and singing- it was really good to- some awesome talent. Then we decided we would go to one of the clubs as a group and go dancing- the band was great and we had so much fun dancing- it had been in forever since we danced! We stayed out unitl 1: On sunday we slept in had breakfast, then the chocolate bar, then we thought we better burn some of those calories off, so we went and played minature golf with some of our friends- that was so much fun! Then we had the Cargill award ceremony were Zak and others were recognized and given an award for their hard work! On Monday we headed back home- we swayed like we were on the ship for 2 more days! We had such a blast, we saw lots of intersting people and things- I think one of the fun things was people watching- I could not believe how much alcohol was consumed- we were definatley on a party cruise- so that made for some intersting encounters! My mom watched the girls, they had lots of fun- and Sicaly became very attached to my mom and did not want me, she cried and cried when my mom left and did not want Zak or me. Who knew what you could do with towels Zak at the awards night At the dance club- having a great time Posted by.

Chapter 7 : October 5 - Wikipedia

(Wednesday) (Tuesday) (Monday) October 5 is the th day of the year (th in leap years) in the Gregorian calendar. There are 87 days remaining.

This past weekend was sort of my final weekend for my BOTC. But I have to go back up in two weeks for a First Aid Course. It was a fun weekend. This weekend Jay announced he had brought some Chocolate Vodka for us all to try. It made for a less than restful night. The instructors were very concerned about our long faces the next morning during the Small Party Taskings Ex. Here we are having a break during practice for our Graduation Parade. The fellow doing the Vulcan gesture was my room mate. The people in blue berets and combats are Air element officers. I found myself repeating many of his helpful tips for the improvement of our personal drill to the cadets last night. That night we experienced for most of us our first Mess Dinner. The rest of us junior officers have to make do with our Class 1 tunics, a white shirt and bow tie. The ladies are required to get a special blouse different depending on branch of service and pumps. A couple of my Air colleagues. The young man on the right was our Parade Commander. We were seated together at dinner. He made me feel a bit old by remarking that I had been married longer than he had been alive. After a bit of polite chitchat in the lounge the LCol asked if the Mess had a pool table and did anyone know how to play Crud? So the party moved over to the informal side of the bar, referred to in Messes world wide as The Snake Pit. And the hi jinx began: The LCol was a pretty enthusiastic Crud player. Crud is a game that uses a pool table and two balls. You roll the cue ball to hit the coloured ball you get three tries. Once the ball is struck, the person on the other team then has to crab the cue ball and hit the coloured ball again before it stops moving or goes into a pocket. You can only shoot from the short sides of the table I kept going off side in my excitement. If you fail in the above you get a strike against you. Play continues until all of one team is eliminated. Needless to say after a few drinks it gets very lively. There are variations, such as Contact Crud in which you can check players as they try to get the ball. So we stayed up too late. I started drinking water once the Port for the toasts was done, since I get horrendous hangovers. But I was still very glad the Sergeant-Major let us sleep in an extra hour the next morning. Of course there was posing for pictures: I tended to hitch a ride with Jay a lot. Taronish, Nicole and Pablo all looking sharp too. I tend to come home pretty happy and energized.

Chapter 8 : The Sharp Style Blog: October

Wednesday, October 26, Social Media Style 10/27/ This is such an awesome sweater for fall, with its unique collar and fall fabric. It looks like it would.

NY Times –” The vanishing began Wednesday night, the most frightened families packing up their cars as soon as they heard the news. They left behind mobile homes, sold fully furnished for a thousand dollars or even less. Or they just closed up and, in a gesture of optimism, left the keys with a neighbor. Dogs were fed one last time; if no home could be found, they were simply unleashed. Two, 5, 10 years of living here, and then gone in a matter of days, to Tennessee, Illinois, Oregon, Florida, Arkansas, Mexico –” who knows? The judge, Sharon Lovelace Blackburn, upheld the parts of the law allowing state and local police to ask for immigration papers during routine traffic stops, rendering most contracts with illegal immigrants unenforceable and requiring schools to ascertain the immigration status of children at registration time. Kanye West is a black nerd. He likes strange, specific stuff. Belonging exclusively or confined to a particular place. Natural to or characteristic of a specific people or place; native; indigenous. Now the economic situation is set to worsen, as the sovereign debt crisis that erupted in early threatens to send the euro zone into its second recession in three years. Greece, Ireland, Portugal and Spain are already in downturns or fighting to escape them, as high unemployment and austerity measures bite. Tutu of South Africa after the host government did not grant his visa request. His agenda included the Oct. It could stay in a slump, many economists say, at least through next spring. If that happens, tax revenues are likely to fall and unemployment is expected to rise, making it even more difficult for Europe to deal with the sovereign debt crisis and protect its shaky banks. With a vote of to 66, the House approved the measure, passed by the Senate just a week ago, closing another anguished chapter in the fiscal war between Republicans and Democrats that continues to dominate Congress. Holy Family Parish 7 Church St. It remained unclear Tuesday whether future short-term spending exercises, which have been the source of partisan conflict all year, would be necessary again this year. Daniel Mark Rano Oct. New Hampshire Certified Green Yard www. McDowell and Andrea for taking such good care of Rene. Also, thank you to the emergency room staff, the ambulance service and Fleury Patry Funeral Home for your thoughtfulness, care and professionalism. We wish to thank everyone for the overwhelming support we received during this difficult time. The slow-moving storms were expected to drop 3 to 4 inches of rain across parts of Rockingham and eastern Merrimack counties. Flash flood warnings were issued in those areas until 2: Forecasters said small creeks and streams could flood, and some roadways could also experience flooding. Richard Belshner, of Kingston, said he lost control of his car on Route in Raymond when the vehicle hydroplaned. Belshner said he tried to relax and keep from tensing up while his car was spinning out of control. He was able to walk away from the accident without any injuries. He said that just before the accident, the rain was coming down hard. Fire Chief Kevin Pratt said Belshner was lucky he went off the road where he did. The bamboo pretty much was like a shock absorber. Power was expected to be out until about 6 p. In some cases, the rains were also accompanied by strong thunderstorms. Firefighters in Chester were called to 41 Lane Road for a house fire that officials said was likely started by lightning. The heavy rains were expected to last into the afternoon, while lighter rain is expected in southern New Hampshire during the evening commute. Ninety films are scheduled to be shown on four screens from October The festival expects to draw 9, people to downtown Portsmouth for the four-day event. Choose Any Or All. The event was a huge success. Thank you also to Mr. Finally, a big thank you to the Royalty Inn for donating lodging for Michael Nerney during his stay in Gorham. Thank you all for supporting our efforts to better the lives of families in our community! Do you need a little motivation or guidance with your scrapbooking project? Or would you just like to scrapbook with other scrapbookers, have a little fun, and share ideas? All ages are welcome, as well as all skill levels, whether beginner or advanced. Come with your photos and scrapbooking tools and supplies. The Team will be happy to meet you and assist you with your project. Two-page layouts and scrapbooking recipe cards will be available for purchase, and raffles will be held. If you are unable to make it to the Oct. We welcome your ideas and opinions on all topics and consider every signed letter for publication in Letters to the Editor. Limit letters to words and include your address. Please provide a phone number for verification purposes. Limit thank you letters to words. Longer letters will only be published as space allows and may be edited. Anonymous letters, letter without full names and generic letters will not be published. Please send your letters to: The second is that Solyndra used political influence to land a loan that was destined to blow up. I think we can now safely concede the first point. The second argument, on the other hand, strikes me as utterly bogus. Yes, there are a few e-mails from inside the government that questioned the loan guarantee. And, yes, Solyndra hired a "shocker! Although Republicans will surely try to keep Solyndra in the news until, oh, next November, the scandal will eventually evaporate because there is very little there. The third criticism is the one that really matters: A corollary point, voiced by Holman Jenkins Jr. Rather, it is funding projects that have already attracted private capital " lots of it. The private sector, in other words, is still the one picking winners and losers. What the program is essentially doing is moving alternative energy innovations to full-scale development. Why is the government doing this? Because this is precisely where the private sector fails. What is hard to come by is money to fund the far more expensive process of commercializing the innovation. Andy Grove, the former chief executive of Intel and still one of the great business minds in America, has been sounding the alarm about this, pointing out that one reason so many American innovations wind up being manufactured in China is that the Chinese are more than happy to finance the commercialization process. That money is going to help the company build three solar power plants in California and Arizona. The plants already have long-term contracts with utilities. They have locked-in cash flows. The risk is minimal. Can you really argue that the government should, therefore, also sit on its hands? Indeed, one goal of the loan guarantee program is to show private capital that these loans make sense " so that the banks can eventually step in and replace the government. The Republicans know all this, surely. In , when the Energy Policy Act was first proposed by the Bush administration, they made some of these same arguments in support of the loan guarantee program, which was part of the bill. The bill passed the House with overwhelming Republican support. Most Democrats voted no. Today, the Republican-led Energy and Commerce Committee is investigating Solyndra, forcing its executives to take the Fifth Amendment, and releasing embarrassing White House e-mails. I looked it up: With the close out of school year, NCCA graduated a total of students in which 60 of those students were recovered dropouts. The board members were presented Certificates of Appreciation for their dedication and exceptional governance of the charter school. Also supported by the board was sending a delegation to the National Alliance for Public Charter School Conference which was funded through a grant. Through a competitive process, NCCA was chosen to be presenters to share its successful model to the nation. The conference took place in Atlanta, Georgia in July But the economy was not that great and jobs were hard to find. Nonetheless, Paris found his way and today, a resident of the N. Veterans Home, had joined the National Guard in and was called up during the Korean War June where he served with the 25th Infantry Division as the BAR Browning Automatic Rifle man in his man rifle squad before becoming squad leader. Army field manuals insisted that successful squad tactics depended on a carefully positioned and skilfully operated BAR. Accordingly, the squad leader tended to assign the BAR to one of his most reliable privates. The BAR man had to be sturdy, for the weapon weighed almost twenty pounds. Company commanders typically picked the smallest infantryman in the company to carry the BAR, with preference for men that were aggressive and could demonstrate a mastery of the big gun. I was in denial. It had taken him years to accept the fact that he needed help.

Chapter 9 : 3 BOYS & A GIRL: October

Wednesday, October 12, A new storm-quick moving rolled through the high country yesterday leaving a little more new snow on the mountains and rain at lower elevations. Aspens are disappearing fast but what a color year with more reds in the leaves than I have ever seen.

So after many months I am finally updating the blog. We are way excited but I am blaming this pregnancy on not updating the blog. My mind has not been the same and this pregnancy has not been as easy-going as the last but we are excited all the same. We get to find out on the 4th They are such a cute couple and we love having a new sister-in-law, especially Kree. Kree loves golf mostly because his daddy loves it. He loves putting the most. We always have a lot of family and there is always a lot of us. We had an intense game of volleyball and then my sister Kari and I organized a game of Minute to Win It It is actually more work than you think. It was a ton of fun. Look closely at his face. Here we are at the parade. Here we are waiting at the river for the fireworks. We played another version of Minute to Win It, always fun. A week or so later my sister Kari and I decided to take the kids back to Indian Hot Springs to cool down from all the heat, well worth it! I decided to buy Kree a tricycle because he is always taking about bikes and I figured he better start learning. It was an amazing concert and I would do it again in a heartbeat. We had a ton of fun. We had a ton of fun as girls tend to do. But I also realized how out of shape I am after riding a bike. Tuesday we find out what we are having so i will definitely post on that. In the meantime Kree keeps us busy and Ragen just got back from Texas for 2nd time so we are happy to have him home. Kree is growing like crazy