

Chapter 1 : Empowering Women's Quotes by Women for Women : Pearls of Wisdom

The book features a wide variety of touching and practical wisdom on starting out, performing, writing music, touring, playing in bands, finding inspiration, partying in a drinks-and-drugs culture and, if the fates allow, handling fame.

The New Testament outlines the elements that are to be included in our services. However, there are many questions that pastors must answer, for which we are not given clear Scriptural prescriptions. Such questions include but are certainly not limited to the following: How should the overall structure arc of the service be designed? Should it be Gospel-shaped in theme, or should content be based entirely upon the sermon? Can it be both? How should historical patterns for worship guide what we do today, and how can we apply these in our setting? These questions then spur on other questions: What should the specific content of the service entail? What styles of verbal presentation should be used in preaching or in praying? What styles of music should be used? What instruments should we use, if any? How do service elements work together so that there is a sense of flow theologically and musically? Should we use screens or simply use hymnals? How should we use screens, if we use them? How should the worship space be designed? You get the idea. The answers that we give for these and other questions affect the excellence of our corporate worship including its discipleship impact each week. Developing concise ways to think about biblical worship is certainly no easy task. These are wise wordsâ€”based upon Scriptural principlesâ€”from a godly man who taught and ministered with his head and his heart. Consider memorizing this brief verse and applying it as part of your philosophy of worship: Technique without form is useless. Form without function is meaningless. Function without mission is mindless. Mission without vision is aimless. Vision without values is heartless.

Chapter 2 : Inspirational Music Quotes, Sayings, Music Quotations : Pearls Of Wisdom

Wisdom For A Young Musician Inspiring Advice and Incredible Insights from the Best in the Business by Bruce Warren If you are a newcomer to the world of music, you may have reservations about the many factors that affect all musicians, from wondering if playing music is a "real job" to experiencing writer's block.

Words can hold such power, Especially if we allow them to. The decision is ours and ours alone, It can mean one thing or two. If the words are negative in general, This can create much harm. Whether they come from you or someone else, Believing in them is cause for alarm. If the words are positive, Allow yourself to hear. And never let them disappear. Words can hold much power, But only if you allow. The power really lies in your hands, Choose only to hear the positive, make this your vow. Changes I sought for joy in peace, and rest to ease my weary mind, Stressed out by such a heavy load, rest I just had to find. My endurance could hold no more, my limits had been met, I needed time to stand aside, sweet time to just forget. No one could tell me what to do, I was a self-made man; My schedules were controlled by me, I had a thorough plan. I had no friends that knew my plight, I kept myself at bay, They all had troubles of their own; besides, what could they say? They envied me with all my wealth, they never saw my pain, I had life altogether, what more was there to gain? But loneliness is terrible and emptiness is sad, There seems no purpose for each day, no reason to be glad. So now I wait; why? There must be more than fortunes, a way to rearrange. There has to be a purpose, and someone surely knows, Why life is complicated, and days so full of woes. Someday I hope to thank you because you saw my need, Perhaps with greater meaning, with purpose, not with greed. To quote the poet, John McLeod: Reading a poem can change your thinking on a topic, or it can describe how you are feeling.

Like the dictionary, it seems to change the subject with every verse. As a matter of fact. Proverbs begins with a brief introductory preface in the first six verses. This is followed by a series of ten different discourses from a father to his son, filled with very practical exhortations on how to face some of the problems of life. That carries us over to the beginning of chapter 10, and so far there have been no proverbs. But in chapter 10 we have a collection of proverbs that are noted for us as the proverbs of Solomon, the wise king of Israel, the son of David. When Solomon became king he had a vision of God in which God asked him what his heart desired above everything else. Solomon asked that he be granted wisdom. Because he asked for this instead of riches or fame, God gave him all three. Therefore, these are the wisdom proverbs of the wisest king that Israel ever had. The book closes with a postlude in chapters 30 and 31 that brings before us the words of two unknown individuals, Agur, son of Jakah, in chapter 30, and Lemuel, king of Massa, in chapter The book of Proverbs expresses the conclusion of the will of man. Together, the books of Psalms, Proverbs and Ecclesiastes give us the cry of the soul of man. In Psalms you have the emotional nature, which is one part of the soul function. But in the book of Proverbs we have the appeal to the will of man and the conclusion of the will; therefore, this book is all about the things man should decide, the choices of life. This is beautifully set before us in the introduction to the book. The proverbs of Solomon, son of David, king of Israel. That men may know wisdom and instruction, understand words of insight, receive instruction in wise dealing, righteousness, justice, and equity; that prudence may be given to the simple, knowledge and discretion to the youth -- the wise man also may hear and increase in learning, and the man of understanding acquire skill, to understand a proverb and a figure, the words of the wise and their riddles. The book of Proverbs is very practical and is recommended especially for those who are just beginning to try to solve some of the mysteries of life. Also, if you are just moving out for the first time into contact with the world and its ways and mysteries, this is an excellent book of admonition. Verse 7 gives the key to the whole book. And, since Proverbs is the book that deals with life, this is also the key verse to all of life and is one of the greatest verses in the Bible. It states the summary and conclusion of this book: The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge[or wisdom]; fools despise wisdom and instruction. There is nothing that is hidden from his knowledge. He understands all mysteries, sees the answer to all riddles. He sees below the surface of everything. Therefore, the beginning of wisdom is to reverence and fear God. There are two kinds of fear. There is the fear that God might hurt us, a fear experienced by those who are trying to run from God. But the fear spoken of here is the fear that we might hurt him -- that something we do might offend him or might grieve his loving heart in concern for us. This word "fear" really means reverence or respect. Obviously, if God has all the answers, then the one who has the key to life is the man or woman, boy or girl, who learns early to respect God and believe him and understand that he tells us the truth. The greatest thing in my Christian experience is that here in the book of God I have found the truth. I have found, through very sad experience sometimes, that what I thought was right was very wrong. But here is the source of truth -- God has spoken. Therefore, the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge. It is not the end; it is the beginning. In chapter 1, verse 8, you have the beginning of the ten discourses to a son from his father. They begin with the child in the home, dealing with his first relationships. Then they move to the time when the child begins to broaden his experience and widen the circle of his understanding and make friends. Therefore, the most important thing for a child to learn as he grows up is how to evaluate and choose his friends. Then, in chapter 3, you have the young man as he grows up and leaves home. As he makes his way into the city, he is immediately confronted with all kinds of pressures and temptations. There is a thoughtful word of warning here concerning some of the temptations he will meet. It speaks very delicately and yet frankly about the pressures of sex and about what wrong steps in response to these pressures can do to a life. Also, there is an admonition concerning getting involved in wrong financial transactions. These are very practical warnings. The whole of this section is summed up in chapter 3, verses 5 and 6: Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight. In my experience with young people no one has ever said, "My ambition is to be a bum down on skid row. Here is the result verses In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths. Be not wise in your own eyes; fear the Lord, and turn away from evil. It will be healing to your flesh and refreshment to your bones. A young man sat in my study not long ago and told me a heartbreaking story. When he left his home and moved out into the city, he did what he thought was right and what he hoped would supply fulfillment to his life. But he drifted downward and got involved in dope until he was mainlining heroin and experimenting with LSD, having fantastic hallucinations. He ended up as a procurer for a prostitute on the streets of San Francisco before God suddenly awakened him and he realized what had happened. That is the kind of thing that the writer of Proverbs is seeking to avoid by pointing out that life can never be understood except in relationship to God. Life is simply too big for us to handle by ourselves. And that is the conclusion that is reached through these opening chapters. Chapters 8 and 9 personify the two ways of life. Wisdom is seen as a beautiful woman, calling those who follow her to come away into the place of victory and achievement and success in life, while folly, or foolishness, which thinks everything it does is right in its own eyes, is personified as an evil woman -- attractive, alluring, tempting us to step aside into death. It is a marvelously-beautiful poetic passage. Beginning with chapter 10 we have this first collection of the wisdom of Solomon -- all very pithy, practical words of advice covering every possible situation of life. Therefore, this is a book that ought to be read again and again, until its wisdom permeates your life. Much of it will be committed to the mind and memory, and you will be able to recall it in times of pressure. This first collection is made up mostly of contrasts, in which the writer sets two things side by side and shows the good and evil results of various attitudes and actions. As you read this section through, you will see these antitheses. For example, in chapter 10, verse He who winks the eye causes trouble, but he who boldly reproves makes peace. But the result of that kind of frankness is peace. Also, in chapter 10, verse 26, is a very expressive proverb: Like vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to those who send him. As vinegar sets the teeth on edge and smoke burns the eyes, so is the man who is entrusted with a message who dawdles along the way. Chapter 11, verse 22, is descriptively practical: An ugly pig with swill dripping from its mouth and a gold ring affixed to its nostrils Gold signifies value -- but in the wrong place. One man gives freely, yet grows all the richer; another withholds what he should give, and only suffers want. Then, in chapter 12, verse 4: A good wife is the crown of her husband, but she who brings shame is like rotteness in his bones. Verses 16 through 22 give a little discourse on the tongue and the dangers and the blessings of it: The vexation of a fool is known at once, but the prudent man ignores an insult. He simply reacts to everything that comes along. But the prudent man learns to control himself, ignoring insults and moving to the heart of the matter. Chapter 12, verses , There is one whose rash words are like sword thrusts, but the tongue of the wise brings healing. Truthful lips endure forever, but a lying tongue is but for a moment. He who spares the rod hates his son, but he who loves him is diligent to discipline him. There is a way which seems right to a man [And how often we think that we know the answers! But the whole counsel of this book is that our own reason and wisdom are never enough], but its end is the way of death. Then chapter 14, verse He who oppresses a poor man insults his Maker, but he who is kind to the needy honors him. The "I-Thou" is the only thing that expresses the concern of a Christian. Chapter 15, verse Sheol and Abaddon lie open before the Lord, how much more the hearts of men! How much more does he know the secrets of the human heart, and can tell us the right way.
