Check out these super fun beaded crafts that making working with beads exciting again between your regular jewelry projects! You can make the big or small, but no matter their size, these fun little creatures are a project that kids will get endless amusement out of once they learn the technique. Choose colours and shapes that look just like the playing pieces that fall down in the classic video game. Glue them together, glue a magnet to the back, and stick them up, just like Moms and Crafters did! Arrange an array of coloured beads in a tinfoil muffin tin and place the tin on a low heat setting on top of the barbecue. Let them melt together and then set them to cool. Hang them up to catch the light beautifully! Pony bead fish It Happens in a Blink suggests this quick and easy crafts for little kids who love arranging little pieces and colourful things. All you need are some regular plastic pony beads and some coloured pipe cleaner! The beads will look like little fish scales and the pipe cleaner can be twisted into a little fish tail. Big, rounded wooden beads are fun for kids to work with as well. String them along a coloured pipe cleaner, knitting or bending it at each end to keep them on. Draw a face on the top bead and you have a little caterpillar, just like this one from A Mummy Too! String them along a piece of black twine or thin leather string, knitting to keep them at one end or the other. Arrange them into a flower shape on top of some wax paper, cover them in another wax sheet, and lightly iron them so they melt together. Perler bead cup covers Perler crafts are pretty versatile! Twin Dragonfly Designs guides you through the process of creating a cover for your cup with a straw hole in the middle. Kids will have a total blast making these colourful bowls with your help, of course! Put one on the side table with candies in it for guests and another by the door to hold your kets and spare change! Get the instructions on Yesterday on Tuesday. Cork magnets with bead features Moms and Crafters shows you how to make these adorable little characters our of beads, corks, wires, and a magnet strip. Use the beads as facial features, hands, and feet! Grab red beads of different sizes, a black bead for the head, and some black crafting wire. The Crafty Blog Stalker walks you through the rest of the process. Grab pipe cleaners and some googly eyes and make an even simpler snake than the idea we listed earlier. Beaded wind chimes Beads are bright and colourful, but many beads together are also great for making pleasant sounds. Happy Hooligans makes the most of that quality by creating colourful wind chimes using water bottles, beads, buttons, string, and paint. Stick a strip of magnet to the back and stick it right onto the fridge! Tell us how you did them in the comments section!

They will make all of your crafting so much easier. These crafts are all pretty simple and all of them can be done by children with adult supervision. Some of them can be done by the kiddos completely on their own. If you want a project for your stash of beads or even if you have to buy the beads you are going to love these. There is something in here for everyone in the family! You know what else offers something for everyone? My 30 top DIY summer sewing projects. There is something for everyone in the family and every room in the house! To make these, you just need a collection of plastic beads and a disposable muffin tin. You can mix and match colors to create such unique suncatchers. This is a great project for the kids and even toddlers can help to create their own designs. These are super easy to make and so gorgeous when they are finished. They would make wonderful gifts for any bookworm that you know and you can completely customize them depending on the number, size and type of beads that you use. These would also make lovely necklaces if you just increase the length of your twine. I really love rustic twine projects. These would make the most adorable Halloween decorations and you could use them in so many ways. Add them to your DIY Halloween wreath or just hang them from fishing line on the porch or all over the house. DIY Beaded Windchimes You can turn an old bottle, an old coffee container or just about anything else into a great windchime by adding a few beads. These DIY windchimes are so easy to make and this is a wonderful project for the kids. Even your toddlers can help to choose the design that they want and add beads to string to make the windchime. Homemade Beaded Bowl Your little ones can make this great beaded bowl almost all by themselves, depending on their ages. These are made with meltable plastic beads and they are perfect for holding jewelry or other trinkets. This is also a really quick and simple project for kids to do and it gives them an amazing bowl to hold whatever they want. Plus, they can choose their own designs and colors to customize them. You could take the time to glue each bead into place or use strings of beads, which makes it much faster and easier. You can buy beads in strings or if you have a collection of beads that you want to use, you could also string them up on fishing line or elastic string to create this same look. You can use beads of any color to match your existing Christmas decorations or just do these in white or clear for a more traditional icicle look. Rustic Burlap And Bead Napkin Ring If you have a bit of burlap that is leftover from other projects, and a few beads, you can make these lovely rustic burlap and bead napkin rings. These are perfect for decorating your farmhouse table and they take only minutes each to make. You can use pearls or choose wooden beads or any other beads that you have on hand. If you love DIY burlap projects, you are going to adore these napkin rings. This is such a fun craft and it lets your little ones create their own fish designs. Kids have been making crafts with pipe cleaners and beads for decades and these little fish are perfect for when you need something for the kids to do. These are super easy to make and so attractive when they are finished. You can use twine, hemp or jewelry wire to make these and they are super easy to customize. You just need some wooden, plastic or glass beads and something to tie them on to make this. You can make these in less than five minutes each and add as few or as many beads as you want to customize each one. You could also do these with decorative beads or spell out names. You make it with a plastic bottle, soap, plastic beads and glue. This is a wonderful discovery toy for sensory play. Kids can watch the beads move slowly through
