RW 85 Each time we gather as a congregation there are those among us who are struggling with sexual temptation. We need to come before God honestly. Though RW subscribers and the denominations represented may have differing opinions regarding the practice of chastity and homosexuality, as followers of Christ we can agree that all are made in the image of God and are therefore worthy of our love and pastoral care. But how are we to address sexuality in the context of worship outside of a sermon? Through conversations with students and staff, Paul Ryan began to identify some of the struggles facing those who are attracted to people of the same sex and found that many of these struggles are common to all of us. The call to chastity or sexual holiness is not just for a segment of our church body but for all of us, young and old. What follows are brief thoughts on various aspects of sexual holiness, as well as appropriate songs to sing. How do we live holy lives in a sexually disordered world? As Paul Ryan points out, it begins with understanding our true identity in Christ. This is our baptismal calling. Our culture, however, places great pressure on us to find our identity elsewhere: We need to encourage one another to place our sexuality in the context of our baptismal calling and affirm our Christian identity. We need to pray for communities that are hospitable, supportive, truthful, admonishing, gracious, and compassionate. For those who struggle to maintain chastity, whether married or single, we need to pray especially for loving role models and friends to give meaning and accountability to their struggles. All of us, and especially single Christians, need prayer to remain faithful in the discipline of chastity by the power of the Holy Spirit. Christians need great courage to speak of their sexual struggles to even their closest friends and family members. Our culture promotes self-fulfillment above all and demands the satisfaction of all desires, especially sexual. Christians with a same-sex attraction often carry a great burden of guilt and regularly feel shame. Others feel the guilt and shame of secret lives, addiction to pornography, or broken relationships. Christ promises us freedom from guilt and shame and bids us to live in the reality of that freedom. The popular media bombard us with images and messages suggesting that our sexuality is solely governed by our wishes and desires. In addition, the personal experiences of homosexuals are powerful and cannot be dismissed. God loved us when he made us; God loved us when he saved us; and God continues to love us and renew us by his Holy Spirit. Christians who wrestle with a same-sex attraction especially need to know that they are loved. Often they hear from the church a message of judgment or even hatred. Chastity In Heidelberg Catechism answer see p. When we define living a chaste life as being sexually holy in our actions, looks, talk, thoughts, or desires, it broadens the responsibility beyond those who are single. That is why he forbids everything which incites unchastity, whether it be actions, looks, talk, thoughts, or desires. Saved by the patient grace of God, we deal patiently with others. Knowing our own weakness and failures, we bring good news to all sinners with understanding of their condition, and with hope in God.
