The part of the game that looks at canopic jars incorrectly states that in an Egyptian burial the jar in the form of the human-headed god Imsety contains the lungs and the jar in the form of the baboon-headed god Hapy contains the liver. However, Imsety should contain the liver and Hapy the lungs. If you like this you may also like The Three Pyramids Can you prepare our high priest for the afterlife before the sun rises? Interactive History The Stone Age Archeological prehistory, is commonly divided chronologically into distinct periods, based on the development of tools from stone to bronze and iron, as well as changes in culture and climate that can be determined from the archeological record; but the boundaries of these periods are uncertain, and the changes between them gradual. Chapter 2 : You wouldn't want to be an Egyptian mummy | Open Library

You Wouldn't Want to be an Egyptian Mummy! Disgusting things you'd rather not know by David Stewart tells step-by-step the process of mummifying a body. This book is laid out in a comic type way so that the information is more Title: "You Wouldn't Want to Be an Egyptian Mummy!"

Showing of 7 next show all This book has information about how a mummy was made and what people used them for around the s. First the dead person gets embalmed ,which means the embalmers take their organs out of the dead person other than their heart. Then the embalmers incase the organs in four jars other than the intestines which the embalmer will put in natron a salt mixture for 40 days than place it in a jar. The mummy will also be placed in natron. After 40 days the mummy gets onion eyes,which is onions painted to look like eyes, and then stuffed the mummy with rags chaff and sawdust. The mummy also gets perfumed to not stink. After 70 days the mummy finally gets its burial. This book was disgusting and made its point. It would take a lot of time,and work to preserve a dead body. Also I would be to lazy to do all that work. I would rather be a pharaoh,lay around in luxury. The only part I would like in preserving the body is making the jars that hold the lungs,intestines , the liver and the stomach, the jars are made of wood and painted to make them look like a Egyptian god. It shares info on what they would do to you once you were dead. If you were poor, sucks for you. Ok with money, great. Nice coffin and linen wrappings. Some rich tourists bought one and threw it into the Nile River because it smelled bad! It does share information in some funny ways and if you get grossed out is on you. I found some interesting things in there. That part I gagged at most. Honestly I think I am a Fiction Reader at heart. I encourage others to read it but to learn the facts. Not for the gross jacko. They are some gross readers. They relish the parts that are most disgusting in my eyes. Like the fact you had to save up your own linen to be mummified. I would recommend this book to anyone who has a children interested in history.
