*Young Writer's Market Manual: A Guide on More Than 70 Publications Where Students Can Submit Their Writing [Penny Lent] on calendrierdelascience.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers.*

The Market Guide for Young Writers: I will highlight each of them. And, I would love to get more titles. So, feel free to send them to me. Market Guides for Writers Professional and pre-published writers are aware of all the market guides. I encourage students who are serious about being published to get one of those guides, but they can be overwhelming. My concern is that this guide is now outdated. Quite outdated, in fact. So, if you or your young writer does get this guide, be sure to look up any publications online to find up-to-date listings. I recommend that for any guide. As soon as they are published, a bunch of the information is already old. Editors change jobs, publications close their doors. Well, what exactly am I recommending? The market listings are not the part I like to focus on. There are over pages of information. From how to format a manuscript, to marketing, to the basics of writing, this book covers a lot of territory. Sure, things are outdated. Add it to the resource shelf at your school or in your home. It is a great basic book that eager young writers will love to have. I love to hand it out and tell them to cherry pick the information.

She is also the founder of consulting agency Boss Babes at Work, which is dedicated to uniting and empowering young female entrepreneurs. The program is designed for the students to hone their writing skills while gaining firsthand experience of how to publish and distribute their books. After the six-month process, when the books are completed and distributed, a savings account will be set up so that their profits can be deposited to help pay for their college education. Hernandez shared with rolling out her purpose in teaming up with an Atlanta middle school and why helping them write their first book will be beneficial for both the students and the community. Check out what she had to say below. What led you to start a publishing company? Tell us the meaning behind the name Purposeful Millennials. I started the company last year in March. During the time I was writing the book [Try God] one of my mentors told me that I needed to start a business. More specifically because there was a new program launching that would help people start and grow [small] businesses. The name [Purposeful Millennials] came from purpose, everything I do I want to ensure that it has a purpose behind it. Millennials came into play because I think society kind of places a negative connotation on millennials. I wanted to ensure that I gave millennials the opportunity to show their talents. Instagram purposefulmillennials What are some of the qualities you look for in aspiring young authors for your publishing company? Tell us about some of the current authors that are with your publishing company. When someone submits their manuscript the main thing I look for is purpose and if [the book] will help someone else. Every book that we have published has helped someone in some way, shape or form. The current authors are myself, which is the book I published last May titled, Try God, which talks about how to have an authentic relationship with God. My next authors are a group of 10 year-olds and they are writing a book regarding their community. So, currently, I have about 14 authors. Aside from being the CEO of a publishing company, you are also the founder of the consulting agency Boss Babes at Work, what inspired you to create this organization? The summer of , I felt it heavy on my heart to unite women entrepreneurs to help them grow their businesses and brands. Since then we had an event, Business Over Brunch, our second one is in February in Atlanta and we have another event in Los Angeles which will be March Recently, you started a youth program for students in Atlanta, the Young Authors Program. What led you to focus on young students? How are you hoping to effect change within the youth and the community? The area I picked is the West End and Vine City community which is a very underdeveloped city within the Atlanta metro area [and] is heavily [involved] with gang violence, drug addiction, and drug abuse. I chose this city because I wanted to work with children who would not normally get the opportunity to achieve something like this. What is the best way for others to get in contact with you?
