This fascination with big numbers taught me something very important early in my life. And I liked that! To this day, spending less than I earn has been the biggest contributing factor to my financial success so far anyway! In fact, I will go so far as to say that it is the most important financial principal there is. Without following this principal, you can never gain financial freedom, build wealth, or reach other financial goals. My Financial Success Story: Saving is part of every financial success story. Everyone has a financial story. So far, mine has been good. Here is my financial story and how spending within my means helped me grow financially: Learning to use money. My basic financial education began when I was young. My parents gave my brothers and I a small allowance for doing our chores and sometimes for good grades on our report cards. My allowance gave me choices on how to spend my money. I could buy things for myself, buy gifts, pay Boy Scouts dues, or save. Even though my allowance was small, I often found ways to do all of these. As I mentioned, I liked big numbers, especially when my savings account was getting larger! As a high schooler, I was expected to use my part time job money to pay for gas, dates, gifts, etc. Because I had a finite amount of money each paycheck, I had to learn how to be judicious with my funds. Thankfully, I had the restraint to use my credit card as a tool. I could have written a check for the balance, but I considered the interest charges part of doing business. Again, because I wanted to build credit. I paid the car off quickly and continued to build my credit. To this day I have not taken out any loan that I could not pay off in full at the time I took it. I have only taken loans for convenience or to build credit. My wife and I have a mortgage, but she purchased the house before we were married. All of this has helped me build an excellent credit rating. Because I learned early in life to live within my means, I had extra money. I overheard my Dad talk about his 401k and IRAs before, but I had no knowledge of what they were, or how mutual funds or other investments worked. Paying yourself first is one of the easiest methods to learn how to spend less than you earn. But I never deprived myself. I live within my means, but I have a lot of toys – electronics, instruments, movies, CDs, etc. I have also owned a motorcycle, taken many nice trips, and I prefer to buy quality items even if I spend more. But here is the difference between myself and some people who are in debt: I rarely make an expensive purchase on a whim, I research to find the best deal for my money, and I take my time to decide if the item is something I will actually use. I am not perfect and I am not rich – but I consider myself financially successful. Why do I think that? I know I have enough money in the bank to pay them in full. I use my rewards credit card and transfer money to pay it off. I rarely write a check and I always make sure I have enough in my account first. I also consider myself to be financially successful because my wife and I were recently able to take a substantial salary reduction because our quality of life is more important to us than money. We could not have afforded to do that if we did not live within our means. I am financially successful because I spend less than I earn. I know it is an easy concept, but one that is not easily mastered. Thankfully, I learned this at an early age, and still continue to do this. I hope you can learn to do it too.

Pin 1 3 Shares Are you finally ready to get your financial health in better shape? For most of us, the future can be an uncertain entity—what our professional and personal lives will look like as the months, years, and decades roll forward can be difficult to predict, and unexpected twists and turns along the way can derail our plans and force us to revise our goals along the way. This uncertainty can cause a great deal of stress, so it makes sense to have as much under our control and working in our favor as possible. Having a financial safety net of sorts to help see us through is obviously beneficial. If so, then keep reading, and consider using the following strategies to get you started on the right path. Get serious One of the most important aspects of getting yourself in good financial shape is to get in the proper mindset for doing so. Like most endeavors in life that require a change in behavior and extended displays of discipline, being in the right mental space at the onset, during the critical first steps, is an essential ingredient for success. So, in order to get started with the right attitude and mindset, try making a list of goals for getting your life in financial order. Both short- and long-term goals are fair game here. Do you want to pay back a loan or reduce your debt? Do you want to make a significant purchase sometime in the future that you want to be in better financial shape for, like a car or home? Are you preparing for a major life change, like a move or starting a family? Having a set of tangible and achievable! The truth is, sometimes it takes having a destination in your sights to make it through a long journey. So, think of your initial move to get your financial life in order as a series of small steps in the right direction. Think of some small ways you can get started—perhaps save a little bit of money each week from each paycheck or find a few ways you can earn some extra money a part-time job or selling some of your unwanted stuff are great ideas. You can also try eliminating some unnecessary expenses in your life. Get help One of the really nice things about getting your financial life in order these days is that there are more tools than ever before to help you stay on track. An army of app developers have devoted their efforts to creating financial planning, organizing, and saving tools that can help you get your finances in order and hit all of your money milestones along your path to financial freedom. A little Internet research to discover the latest and greatest apps that best meet your needs is time well spent. You can also turn to friends and family for help—the truth is, having the important people in our lives helping to keep us motivated can mean the difference between success and failure in a challenging situation. So, let your friends and family know about your financial plans, fill them in on how they can help, and use their support to achieve your goals. Use the advice and strategies presented here to help get you moving in the right direction when it comes to your money and finances.

It is amazing to think how fast has gone by and all that has happened this year. Many have achieved financial success this year in a timely manner by visiting this site. Still others are coming to this site for the first time and they are curiousâ€”as they should beâ€”as curiosity is a quality that we all should have as it provides you with the inner workings of your mind to look deeper and more critically into anything that you are curious about. As December comes in and will soon leave arrival is just around the corner I thought that it would be appropriate at this time to look at more inspiring and encouraging ways that this site could inspire youâ€”as well as myself to do more in the coming weeks and months. Hopefully as I create this page, my thoughts will flow in a direction that can lead to increased success for you and also increased success for myself as well â€”as I need and have a real desire to do more at this time, and hopefully so do you. Furthermore, my highly intensified writing style and genuine passion to see you achieve your dreams is even more importantâ€”as that is why this site is like no other on the internet! This page is my attempt to not only inspire and encourage you to do more but also to inspire myself as well! I too have procrastinated and failed to complete a number of books that although partially completeâ€”serves no real benefit to mankindâ€”as they are really nothing at this time. Hopefully this discussion will inspire you and also give me what I need to complete a number of tasks in a timely manner. It is important that we all see success in our future as we take the necessary actions to make that success occur! First and foremost you must pursue your goals and objectives with a spirit that you will operate in excellence at all times, you will consistently pursue your goals and you will be resilient and give it your absolute best on a daily basis. Your ultimate success must be your ultimate goal! You must possess on the inside of you a high level of fire, energy, passion and a real desire to achieve moreâ€”daily! You cannot do like those who talk about achieving meaningful goals but take no real action on a consistent basis to make it happen in real time! You cannot wait on others to take you to your dreamâ€”you must take yourself toward your dream and life purpose! You must always realize that the inspiration and encouragement that you receive from this siteâ€”or any other source, does not exempt you from problems or situations occurring in your life that you may think are unwarranted. However, you will possess the tools and skills that are needed to navigate your situation and achieve at a higher level if you focus in on the pages on this site and comprehend at the highest level that is within you at this time. When it comes to assessing your future you must ask yourself: Is there something that I need to learn and do to make my dreams come true? Is there something that I can do to head off a possible crisis in my life? It is important that you gain the proper skills that you need to prevent bad things from happening in your life. Do you even know how to use the skills that you currently have to achieve more and do your absolute best at all times? Your journey toward success may begin with one small step but continues with giant stridesâ€”if you do it right! Dreaming about the success that you desire serves no real purpose without action! If it was easy we would all be where we want to be now including myself. Goalâ€”what are your goal s? Objectiveâ€”what is your end game? Desireâ€”do you desire to achieve at your absolute best that you have within you or are you just kidding yourself? What difference will you make while here on earth? Will you impact in a major way those who you are around at a minimum? Will you take managed risks and appropriate risks to achieve more while here on earth? It is important that you realize that not taking risks means that you will not succeed in what you failed to take the risk to achieve! Is that really who you are or are you destined to go far? The goal of this article and site is to provide you and others the opportunity to achieve at your highest level of excellence. Inspiration Desire It all starts inside of you At the same time it is my desire that this article and site will light a deeper fire within my heart to do moreâ€”so that you can achieve more and this article and site can possible play a pivotal role in helping you get to where you need or want to be in a more efficient manner. May all of your dreams be attainedâ€”!
