

Chapter 1 : LitCharts | From the creators of SparkNotes, something better.

Summary/Annotation -> In a voice both innocent and wise, touchingly reminiscent of Anne Frank's, Zlata Filipovic's diary has awoken the conscience of the world. Zlata began her diary just before her eleventh birthday, when there was peace in Sarajevo and her life was that of a bright, intelligent, carefree young girl.

Student Answers hlangendorff Student Animal Farm has been popular with our eighth graders; however, it is best taught in conjunction with the Russian Revolution. The seventh graders always enjoy The Outsiders. The teachers have a day where they and their students dress up in period costumes and watch the movie as a learning celebration. Out of the Dust is a beautifully written book about the Dust Bowl. It is written as a series of poems. The narrator is a young girl and the sixth graders relate well to her character. It is an unforgettable book. Most are 6th graders. What do you think? I want to stay as true as I can to my class title, "Great American Writers". I was thinking of doing both together for my middle school boys group. I wanted a very different kind of book and setting for both groups for my second semester. Edith Wharton is another. Her stuff is a little heady for middle schoolers, though. If you choose her, I would go with her short stories or maybe even Ethan Frome. One of her short stories, "Roman Fever," is my particular favorite. You might also try some short plays. My Brother Sam is Dead is another great story to consider. Thanks for your suggestions. I love Edith Wharton and was also a bit hesitant if it was too "heady", as you put it, for middle schoolers. I wanted to try something different. I am not sure the age range, but I just finished To Kill a Mockingbird and while a bit deep we got through it and end enjoyed it. I developed a lesson plan on racism and hatred and compared it to living in the country where I am located. Another book my youngsters are reading is "Around the World in 80 Days". I also use "Dracula" since most kids are into the whole vampire shtick. If you are wondering, I teach privately and each student is at a different level, hence the different books. I also have one student reading Robin Hood. The novel has a great deal of material in talking or writing about why characters act and feel the way they do. I have used it in both middle school and high school. Access hundreds of thousands of answers with a free trial.
